Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, subject to certain exceptions, the records of the department of workforce development (DWD) relating to the administration of the worker's compensation law are subject to inspection and copying under the open records law. Current law provides, however, that a record maintained by DWD that reveals the identity of an employe who claims worker's compensation benefits; the nature of the employe's claimed injury; the employe's medical condition; the extent of the employe's disability; the amount, type or duration of the employe's worker's compensation benefits; or any financial information provided to DWD by a self-insured employer or an applicant for self-insurer status, is confidential and not open to inspection or copying under the open records law, unless one of the following applies:

1. The requester is the employe who is the subject of the record.
2. The record requested contains confidential information concerning a worker's compensation claim and the requester is an insurance carrier or employer that is a party to any worker's compensation claim involving the employe who is the subject of the record.

3. The record requested contains financial information provided by a self-insured employer or applicant for self-insurer status and the requester is the self-insured employer or applicant for self-insurer status whose financial information is contained in the record.

4. A court of competent jurisdiction in this state orders DWD to release the record.

5. The requester is the subunit of DWD that administers child and spousal support or a county child support agency and the request is limited to the name and address of the employe who is the subject of the record, the name and address of the employe's employer and any financial information about the employe contained in the record.

6. The department of revenue requests the record for purposes related to the collection of delinquent taxes.

This bill provides that the records of DWD relating to the administration of the worker's compensation law are not subject to inspection or copying under the open records law, unless one of the six situations described above applies.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
