Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, at the general election, an elector may vote a straight party ticket for the candidates of any party that has a separate ballot or column on the ballot, except for candidates for the offices of president and vice president. In order to vote for candidates for the offices of president and vice president, an elector must cast a separate ballot or vote, regardless of whether he or she votes a straight party ticket.

This bill eliminates the authority for any elector, other than an overseas or military elector, to vote a straight party ticket. In addition, this bill eliminates the separate presidential ballot. This bill first applies to elections held on January 1, 2000.
