SENATE BILL 224

- 1 beverages, authorizing other brewpub interests and operations and limiting
2 certain operations of brewers.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, alcohol beverages are generally distributed to consumers under a three-tier distribution system: the manufacturer may sell only to a wholesaler or rectifier; the wholesaler or rectifier may sell only to a wholesaler or to a retailer; the retailer may sell only to the consumer. With specific exceptions, no person may sell outside the three-tier system, and no person may sell alcohol beverages at retail unless the person possesses a license or permit authorizing the sale on the premises where sold.

Under current law, a brewer of fermented malt beverages (beer) must hold a permit issued by the Department of Revenue (DOR). A brewer's permit authorizes the brewer to manufacture, possess, and store beer on the brewery premises. A beer wholesaler's license, issued by a municipality, authorizes the license holder to sell to retailers or wholesalers beer in original packages that may not be consumed on the wholesaler's premises. A brewer may hold a wholesaler's license and may own, maintain, and operate a warehouse for which the brewer holds a wholesaler's license. The brewer may transport beer between the brewery premises and the brewer's warehouse. The brewer may sell beer at wholesale to beer retailers and beer wholesalers if the brewer holds a wholesaler's license. With various limitations discussed below, the brewer may sell beer at retail if the brewer holds a retailer's license. A brewer may also hold a limited intoxicating liquor wholesaler's permit, for wine only.

Under current law, a brewer may hold a Class "A" retail license, which authorizes the retail sale of beer in original packages for consumption off the licensed premises, but, with exceptions, may not hold a Class "B" license, which authorizes the retail sale of beer for consumption on or off the premises where sold. One exception allows a brewer to maintain and operate, and hold a Class "B" license for, one retail premises on brewery premises and one retail premises on property owned by the brewer or its subsidiary or affiliate. Under another exception, in addition to these two Class "B" licenses, a brewer may possess a Class "B" license for not more than four restaurants in which the sale of alcohol beverages accounts for less than 50 percent of gross receipts if the brewer is a "small brewer" (generally one that manufactures less than 4,000 barrels of beer annually), the restaurant also sells other brewers' beer, and the brewer's own beer is purchased by the restaurant from an independent wholesaler. A brewer may hold both a wholesaler's license and Class "B" license but, with an exception for grandfathered licenses, may not hold both a wholesaler's license and a Class "A" license. A "Class B" license authorizes the retail sale of intoxicating liquor for consumption on or off the licensed premises, which authorization is subject to certain limitations, some of which depend on whether the issuing municipality has adopted an ordinance related to "Class B" licenses. A "Class C" license authorizes the retail sale of wine by the glass or in an opened original container for consumption on the licensed premises and may be issued only for a restaurant. Because a "Class B" license may be issued only to the holder of a Class "B" license, a brewer is limited in the number of "Class B" licenses it may hold.

Under current law, beer may not be sold, transported, or delivered to a Class "A" licensee or Class "B" licensee unless the beer is first unloaded at and distributed from a licensed beer wholesaler's warehouse, which generally must be at a location that is physically separate from any retail premises or brewery premises. However, there are a number of exceptions to this prohibition, including exceptions that apply to certain brewers that hold wholesale and retail licenses or that manufacture 50,000 barrels of beer or less annually. Also under current law, deliveries of beer to retailers may be made only by licensed wholesalers and must be made to retailers only at their retail premises. No retailer may transport beer from one retail premises to another retail premises to sell it unless a brewer operates both retail premises. Current law also requires, with limited exceptions, that beer wholesalers enter into written agreements with brewers supplying beer brands that grant to the wholesalers distribution rights within exclusive designated sales territories in order for the beer to be distributed, and further imposes requirements on the termination of these agreements. A brewer, in providing beer to its own retail premises, is not subject to restrictions on the sale, transportation, and delivery of beer generally applicable to wholesalers and retailers.

This bill creates a brewpub permit issued by DOR. An applicant is eligible to obtain a brewpub permit if all of the following apply:

1. The applicant manufactures not more than 10,000 barrels of beer each year.
2. The applicant's entire beer manufacturing process occurs on the brewpub premises.
3. The applicant operates a restaurant on the brewpub premises in which the sale of alcohol beverages accounts for less than 60 percent of the restaurant's gross receipts.
4. The applicant holds a Class "B" license for the restaurant and offers for sale in the restaurant, in addition to its own beer, beer manufactured by other brewers.
5. The applicant holds a business tax registration certificate issued by DOR.
6. The applicant does not hold or have an interest in a Class "A" license, a beer wholesaler's license, a brewer's permit, or an alcohol beverage, warehouse permit, and does not hold or have an interest in a Class "B," "Class B," or "Class C" license other than one for brewpub premises.

If an applicant for a brewpub permit has no current operations, the applicant can certify that the applicant will comply with these requirements prior to or upon commencing operations under the brewpub permit. If an applicant for a brewpub permit holds a brewer's permit, wholesale license, or any other prohibited license or permit at the time of the application, the applicant can certify that the applicant will surrender any such license or permit upon issuance of the brewpub permit.

A brewpub permit authorizes a brewpub to do all of the following:

1. Manufacture beer on the brewpub premises, up to 10,000 barrels each year for all brewpub premises, if the entire manufacturing process occurs on these premises.

SENATE BILL 224

2. Bottle on the brewpub premises beer that has been manufactured on these premises.

3. Package in refillable containers exceeding 24 ounces in volume, on brewpub premises, beer that has been manufactured on these premises, and possess and store on brewpub premises any beer.

4. Transport beer that has been manufactured on the brewpub premises between these premises and any other brewpub premises or brewpub Class “B” premises.

5. Sell at wholesale, ship, transport, and deliver to wholesalers, from the brewpub premises, beer manufactured on these premises or on other brewpub premises.

6. Sell at wholesale, ship, transport, and deliver to retailers, from the brewpub premises, beer manufactured on these premises or on other brewpub premises, but only up to 1,000 barrels of beer each year, not including beer provided to the brewpub’s own retail premises.

7. Sell alcohol beverages at retail on the brewpub premises in accordance with the terms of any Class “B,” “Class B,” or “Class C” license held by the brewpub.

A brewpub may not hold more than six permits for brewpub locations. A brewpub may hold only Class “B,” “Class B,” and “Class C” licenses for restaurants on brewpub premises.

Like the holder of a brewer’s permit, a brewpub, in providing beer to its own retail premises, is not subject to restrictions on the sale, transportation, and delivery of beer generally applicable to wholesalers and retailers. However, a brewpub does not hold a wholesaler’s license and may maintain wholesale operations, including the sale, transportation, and delivery to retailers if otherwise authorized, from its brewpub premises. To distribute its beer through licensed beer wholesalers, a brewpub must enter into written agreements with the wholesalers for each brewpub brand distributed providing exclusive designated sales territories to the wholesalers for these brands. A brewpub is also subject to certain requirements generally applicable to wholesalers when selling its own beer to unaffiliated retailers.

Current law prohibits a person from operating a restaurant unless the person has been issued a restaurant permit. This bill prohibits a person issued a brewer’s permit after the bill’s effective date from holding a restaurant permit, thereby requiring a person who intends to begin manufacturing beer and operating a restaurant after this date to obtain a brewpub permit if the person is otherwise eligible for a brewpub permit.

The bill also repeals the authorization for a small brewer to possess a Class “B” license for not more than four restaurants in which the sale of alcohol beverages accounts for less than 50 percent of the restaurant’s gross receipts.

Current law includes a global severability provision applicable to all statutes, which states that the provisions of the statutes and of any session law are severable. If any provision of the statutes or of a session law is invalid, or if the application of either to any person or circumstance is invalid, the invalidity does not affect other provisions or applications that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application.

SENATE BILL 224

This bill includes another severability provision specifically applicable to chapter 125 of the statutes relating to alcohol beverages. The bill states that if any provision or clause of chapter 125 or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the invalidity does not affect other provisions or applications of the chapter that can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of the chapter are severable.

3 or possess fermented malt beverages purchased from any person other than a
4 wholesaler holding a license under this chapter for the sale of fermented malt
5 beverages. Any person who violates this subsection may be fined not more than 6 $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than 9 months or both.

7 (10) (a) 1. “Brand” means any word, name, group of letters, symbols, or 8 combination thereof, including the name of the brewer or brewpub if the brewer’s or 9 brewpub’s name is also a significant part of the product name, adopted and used by

19 whether oral or written, to obtain a supply of a brand of fermented malt beverages

21 out-of-state shipper’s permit after the brewer, brewpub, brewer’s agent, brewpub’s
22 agent, or holder of an out-of-state shipper’s permit has terminated, cancelled, or
23 failed to renew an agreement, whether oral or written, with a terminated wholesaler
24 to supply that same brand of fermented malt beverages.

SENATE BILL 224SECTION 20

14 market value of the distribution rights to any discontinued brand of fermented malt
15 beverages assumed by that successor wholesaler for the applicable part of the same
16 territory, less any amount paid to the terminated wholesaler by the brewer, brewpub,

3 3. The wholesaler or a principal of the wholesaler knowingly distributed any 4 brand of the brewer, brewpub, brewer's agent, brewpub's agent, or holder of an
5 out-of-state shipper's permit outside the territory authorized by the brewer,
6 brewpub, brewer's agent, brewpub's agent, or holder of an out-of-state shipper's
7 permit for distribution of the brand.

10 fermented malt beverages to another retail licensee unless the wholesaler has an 11 agreement for general wholesale distribution of that brand of fermented malt
12 beverages with the brewer, brewpub, brewer's agent, brewpub's agent, or holder of 13 an out-of-state shipper's permit supplying that brand.

14 (b) If a wholesaler who holds a retail license issued under this chapter violates
15 par. (a), any other wholesaler aggrieved by such violation or the brewer or brewpub
16 may bring an action against such wholesaler in any court of competent jurisdiction
17 for damages sustained by the aggrieved wholesaler or the brewer or brewpub as a
18 consequence of the violation, together with the actual costs of the action.
19 Notwithstanding s. 814.04 (1), a wholesaler or the brewer or brewpub who prevails
20 in an action under this paragraph may recover reasonable actual attorney fees
21 incurred in the action.

7 brewers, brewpubs, or out-of-state shippers.

8 (c) "Designated sales territory" means the geographical area identified in a

18 permit issued under s. 125.19, which premises shall be in this state and shall be a

3 condition ~~than~~ that an unusual amount of time is required to determine therefrom
4 the amount of tax due, the secretary may give notice of such fact to such person and
5 may require the records to be kept in such form as the secretary prescribes. If such 6 requirements are not complied with within 30 days after the date of the notice, the 7 brewer, brewpub, bottler, manufacturer, rectifier, wholesaler, or retailer shall pay
8 the expenses reasonably attributable to the determination of tax at the rate of $30
9 per day for each auditor. The secretary shall render a bill therefor by registered mail
10 to the person charged with payment at the conclusion of the audit, which bill shall 11 constitute notice of assessment and demand of payment thereof. The brewer,
12 brewpub, bottler, manufacturer, rectifier, wholesaler, or retailer shall, within 10

1 deemed prima facie evidence that such products are kept with intent to sell and that
2 such products are subject to the tax herein imposed.

3 SECTION 31. 139.22 of the statutes is amended to read:

4 139.22 Confiscation. If a duly authorized employee of the department of
