Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate:

Under current law, local governmental units may require residency requirements on its employees, or on those wishing to take a test for employment.

This proposal would create an exception in cases where both spouses of a married couple work for different local units of government that impose residency requirements on their employees. Only one spouse would be required to live under the jurisdictional limitations of the municipality's residency requirement. In addition, if one of the spouses wishes to apply for employment or take a fitness examination for employment with another municipality that also restricts residency, this bill prohibits that spouse from being denied the opportunity.

This bill does not apply to statutory requirements relating to local elected officials, state residency requirements, school district officers, employees under public works contracts, those on town sanitary district commissions, nor those appointed to a county or town board.

The fiscal effect of this bill on local governmental units is indeterminable. In some cases, municipalities may have increased costs in the event additional personnel or other resources are needed to handle emergencies due to the required response time by emergency/medical personnel. These costs may be incurred if one of the spouses is involved in emergency/medical work and lives in a jurisdiction that is outside the radius necessary to permit a timely response.

It is not possible to provide a precise estimate of these costs because each municipality will be affected differently depending on its size, population, and number of employees. In addition, it is not possible to estimate the number of married couples that may have both spouses working for different municipalities that have residency requirements.
