Under current law, each county is required to appoint a local emergency planning committee that is responsible for facilitating preparation and implementation of an emergency response plan for responding to the release of a hazardous substance. The division of emergency management administers a grant program to provide local emergency planning committees with funds for maintaining, exercising, reviewing, and implementing emergency response plans related to the release of a hazardous substance, purchasing computers, purchasing equipment and supplies that may be used in responding to the release of a hazardous substance, and for administrative costs.

The bill creates a new grant program administered by the office of justice assistance to provide funds to local emergency planning committees for the purchase of materials and services related to investigating, preventing, and responding to acts of terrorism. The bill defines "acts of terrorism" as certain felonies that are committed with intent to influence the policy of a governmental unit, punish a governmental unit for a prior policy decision, affect the conduct of a governmental unit by homicide or kidnapping, or to intimidate or coerce a civilian population. The materials and services that local emergency planning committees may use the grant funds to purchase include communications equipment; safety or protective equipment for emergency response personnel; training related to the investigation or prevention of, or response to, acts of terrorism that pose a threat to the environment; and information systems, software, or computer equipment for investigating acts of terrorism that pose a threat to the environment.

STATE GOVERNMENT

OTHER STATE GOVERNMENT

Under current law, each county is required to appoint a local emergency planning committee that is responsible for facilitating preparation and implementation of an emergency response plan for responding to the release of a hazardous substance. The division of emergency management administers a grant program to provide local emergency planning committees with funds for maintaining, exercising, reviewing, and implementing emergency response plans related to the release of a hazardous substance, purchasing computers, purchasing equipment and supplies that may be used in responding to the release of a hazardous substance, and for administrative costs.

The bill creates a new grant program administered by the office of justice assistance to provide funds to local emergency planning committees for the purchase of materials and services related to investigating, preventing, and responding to acts of terrorism. The bill defines “acts of terrorism” as certain felonies that are committed with intent to influence the policy of a governmental unit, punish a governmental unit for a prior policy decision, affect the conduct of a governmental unit by homicide or kidnapping, or intimidate or coerce a civilian population. The materials and services that local emergency planning committees may use the grant funds to purchase include: communications equipment; safety or protective equipment for emergency response personnel; training related to the investigation or prevention of, or response to, acts of terrorism that pose a threat to the environment; and information systems, software, or computer equipment for investigating acts of terrorism that pose a threat to the environment.

Currently, DOA is directed to provide police services to safeguard public property for which DOA has management responsibility. DOA may also contract with other state agencies to provide police services at other state properties. This bill increases the police officer positions authorized for DOA by 5.0 FTE PR positions. The cost of the positions is paid from charges assessed against the appropriations that finance the operation of the properties that are protected by the officers.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
