TO: All Legislators
FROM: Rep. Rick Skindrud
DATE: May 21, 2001
RE: Co-sponsorship of LRB 2444/2 relating to exempting certain horse boarding and horse training facilities from state building codes.

At the request of Dane County, I am introducing a bill that would exempt horse boarding and horse training facilities from the state building code. Currently, most agricultural buildings are exempt from the state building code. This proposal would expand that exemption to cover horse boarding and horse training facilities.

If you would like to co-sponsor LRB 2444/2, please contact my office at 266-3520 by Tuesday, June 5, 2001. The LRB analysis is printed below.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

With certain exceptions, current law gives the department of commerce (department) jurisdiction over all buildings in this state that are used by the public (public buildings) and all places of employment for the purpose of ensuring that the buildings are safe. Current law requires the department to promulgate standards for the safe construction of public buildings. Under these construction standards and under certain statutes, public buildings and places of employment are subject to numerous requirements with regard to their construction, including requirements with regard to ventilation, energy conservation, accessibility, fire safety, electrical construction, and plumbing construction. Plans for the construction of public buildings and places of employment currently must be approved by the department or by certain authorized local officials, to ensure that the public buildings or places of employment will be built in compliance with all applicable construction standards.

Currently, a horse boarding or horse training facility may be a public building and, unless the horse boarding or horse training is used in farming, it may be a place of employment.

This bill exempts all horse boarding and horse training facilities that do not contain an area for the public to view a horse show from the definitions of "public building" and "place of employment." As a result, under this bill, these horse boarding and horse training facilities are not subject to the construction standards promulgated by the department or to construction-related statutes that generally apply to public buildings and places of employment. In addition, under the bill, the plan submission and approval process does not apply to the proposed construction of these horse boarding and horse training facilities.
