Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

The fiscal effect of the proposed legislation can not be determined. While there may well be no fiscal effect related to the actual prohibition of administrators sitting on certain corporate boards, the knowledge gained in the course of such service might result in establishment of more efficient administrative techniques at our institutions or in the development of relationships which might result in additional contributions to university foundations or research and scholarship endowments. Thus, there might be a financial loss to our institutions were this legislation to be successful.
