Description The regulation of traveling sales crews, requiring the exercise of rule-making authority, and providing penalties

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

The department anticipates few employers will register with the department to conduct business in Wisconsin as an employer of "traveling sales crews". This bill places similar restrictions on employers who used traveling sales crews as employers who hire minors for door-to-door sales. Over the years few door-to-door sales business annually registered with the department. The department expects a similar impact with this legislation. The proposed law is anticipated to be a preventive measure.

The department also anticipates it will receive no more than one or two complaints each year of traveling sales crews illegally operating in Wisconsin. The department anticipates it will take approximately 40 hours to fully investigate each complaint using an Equal Rights Officer-Senior. The department believes it can absorb the additional workload.

The department will also have to develop administrative regulations to implement this legislation. The cost of developing these regulations and preparing brochures to explain this new law and regulations to the public will be a one time cost of $1,500.00.

The department doesn't anticipate any local financial impact with this legislation. Enforcement of the bill's provisions will be primarily handled by the department. Local municipalities will only incur costs if they choose to establish similar local ordinances.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications
