2011

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Currently, the senate consists of 33 members representing 33 senate districts and the assembly consists of 99 members representing 99 assembly districts. Each senate district is composed of three underlying assembly districts.

This bill changes the number of senators to 25 and the number of representatives to the assembly to 75. Under the bill, each senate district is composed of three underlying assembly districts. The bill specifies the assembly district numbers that constitute each senate district but does not specify the boundaries of assembly districts. The boundaries of assembly districts under current statutes are based on the 1983 redistricting. In 2002, a U.S. district court substituted different boundaries by court order.

The bill first applies with respect to the next decennial legislative redistricting that occurs after its enactment.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

4 SECTION 1. 4.001 (1) of the statutes is renumbered 4.001 and amended to read:

Each senate district shall be entitled to elect one member of the senate. Each assembly district shall be entitled to elect one representative to the assembly.
