Description Requiring certain persons to hold certificates of food protection practices in order to operate certain school lunchrooms participating in the National School Lunch Program

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Under current law, no person may conduct, maintain, manage, or operate a restaurant unless the operator or manager of the restaurant holds a valid certificate of food protection practices (FPP certificate) issued by the Department of Health Services (DHS). Current law defines "restaurant" to include any public or private school lunchroom for which food service is provided by contract, but excludes from the definition of "restaurant" any public or private school lunchroom for which food service is directly provided by the school. A person may obtain an FPP certificate by satisfactorily completing an examination that is approved by DHS and allows an individual to demonstrate basic knowledge of food protection practices or by achieving comparable compliance. An FPP certificate is valid for five years and may be renewed if the holder of the FPP certificate satisfactorily completes an approved examination.

This bill provides that no person may conduct, maintain, manage, or operate a school lunchroom that is in a school that is participating in the federal National School Lunch Program and for which food service is directly provided by the school unless the operator or manager of the lunchroom, or his or her designee, holds a valid FPP certificate issued by DHS.

Local: It is unknown how many schools are participating in the National School Lunch Program for which food service is directly provided by the school district. It is also unknown how many of those managing a school lunchroom that is currently in the National School Lunch Program and for which food service is directly provided by the school district have a current certificate of food protection practices issued by the Wisconsin Department of Health Services. For those that are managing a school lunchroom in the National School Lunch Program where food service is directly provided by the school district and who do not have a current certificate of food protection practices, it is unknown how much time will be required to pass an examination and how much the certificate fee will be under DHS 196. Thus, the cost is indeterminate.

State: The department may be asked to provide information to local school districts to help them comply with this law. In addition, the department may send a bulletin to school districts informing them of the change in law. The cost of performing these tasks is indeterminate and could be absorbed by the department.
