Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill allows an individual to use an identification card issued by a federally recognized Indian tribe in this state as proof of residence for voter registration purposes if the identification card indicates the individual's current and complete name and residential address. Current law allows an individual to use an identification card issued by a federally recognized Indian tribe in this state as proof of identification for voting purposes.

This bill expands the definition of "official identification card," for purposes related to purchasing alcohol beverages, to include a valid identification card issued by a federally recognized Indian tribe in this state that contains the card holder's photograph, full name, address, and date of birth. Current law does not require a person to present an official identification card in order to purchase alcohol beverages. However, a licensed retailer of alcohol beverages may require a person to present an official identification card, documentary proof of age, a driver's license issued by another state, or any other form of identification or proof of age acceptable to the retailer before providing alcohol beverages to the person or allowing the person to enter the retail licensed premises. In addition, current law imposes a variety of penalties for various offenses relating to the falsification, adulteration, or misuse of an official identification card.

The bill also allows an individual to use a valid identification card issued by a federally recognized Indian tribe in this state that contains the card holder's photograph, full name, address, and date of birth for the purpose of certain sales and purchases that, under current law, require the seller or purchaser to present a valid identification card, including 1) purchasing cigarettes, nicotine products, or tobacco products; 2) selling nonferrous scrap and other metal articles to a scrap dealer; 3) selling used home furnishings to an antique dealer or recycler; and 4) selling secondhand articles or secondhand jewelry to a pawnbroker, secondhand article dealer, or secondhand jewelry dealer.

Finally, current law prohibits certain prescribed controlled substances from being dispensed to an individual by a pharmacist or other practitioner unless the individual presents valid identification. The bill adds to the list of valid forms of identification for this purpose a valid identification card issued by a federally recognized Indian tribe in this state that contains the card holder's photograph, full name, address, and date of birth.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
