Hi Bill,

Sounds good. You could use specific dates/details, but I'm not sure that you necessarily need them for the draft. You could simply require DHS to make the specific information (live date options, webinar options) available on its website, or something along those lines. If that sounds okay to you, we could take a shot at drafting that. We might have some follow up questions for you about the sunset and the scope of who would be required to attend the presentations (for example, I'm thinking about pediatricians currently still in school, but that might be licensed within the time period...).

We'll get a start on this, and touch base about any issues if we don't hear from you first.

Best,

Sarah

Hi Sarah, last session you drafted our PANS/PANDAS bill. The group that spearheaded the effort has come up with a possible solution to some of the objections from last session.

We would like a bill that requires pediatricians and pediatric specialties (ie. pediatric neurology, rheumatology, psychiatry) to do two hours of a presentation on the topic of neuroimmune disorders in children. . The presentations will be held on several occasions in 20/20 (specific dates and locations are available) also webinars that can be attended online will also be available. The mandate would be two total hours across two years (either one each year or two in one year)The bill will sunset in two years.

This kind of bill is very new to me. I imagine we will need specific dates, and details.

Thank you,

1 AN ACT^{gc}; relating to: requiring pediatricians and pediatric specialists to view
2 presentations about neuroimmune disorders in children.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill requires each physician who specializes in general pediatrics or a pediatric specialty to view not less than ^{two} 2 hours of live presentations or webinars about neuroimmune disorders in children by January 1, 2022. Also, under the bill, the Department of Health Services must designate the dates on which the live presentations and webinars about child neuroimmune disorders will be held and must make information about the presentations and webinars available on its Internet site.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

3 SECTION 1. Nonstatutory provisions.
4 (1) EDUCATION ON NEUROIMMUNE DISORDERS IN CHILDREN REQUIRED FOR 5 PEDIATRICIANS AND PEDIATRIC SPECIALISTS. By January 1, 2022, each physician who
6 specializes in general pediatrics or a pediatric specialty on the effective date of this

1 subsection shall view not less than 2 hours of live presentations or webinars
2 designated by the department of health services about neuroimmune disorders in
3 children. The department of health services shall designate several dates during
4 both 2020 and 2021 for the live presentations and webinars about neuroimmune
5 disorders in children under this subsection to be held and shall make information
6 about the live presentations and webinars available on its Internet site.

Hi Sarah, I think that Starting off without the dates and directing DHS to make the date available is a good idea. Also, I'm currently looking into how many continuing credits pediatricians are required to take right now and if we could get these seminars to qualify as part of those credits.
