Description creating a nonrefundable individual income tax credit for certain adoption expenses and modifying eligibility for the adoption expenses tax deduction

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

This bill creates a nonrefundable individual income tax credit for adoption expenses incurred by an individual who is eligible for, and claims, the federal adoption expenses credit. The state credit may be claimed for up to $5,000 of qualified adoption expenses, to the extent that the expenses exceed their federal credit eligibility. Unused amounts may be carried forward for up to five years.

The maximum credit that may be claimed each fiscal year by all claimants is $500,000. If the total amount of eligible claims exceed this amount, DOR must prorate the amount of credit that each claimant may receive.

The bill also restricts the state's current law deduction for up to $5,000 of adoption expenses. Under the bill individuals may only claim the deduction to the extent that the adoption expenses are not claimed under the federal or state credits.

In 2016, there were approximately 1,360 Wisconsin claimants for the federal adoption credit. Based on IRS data for the federal adoption credit, about 44% of those claims, or 600 credits, are new claims, while the remaining 56% are carryover claims. A sample of the claims suggests that allowing a state credit of up to $5,000 of qualified expenses in excess of the federal credit would yield an average credit amount of about $3,850. Absent the $500,000 fiscal year limit, the total credit claims would be about $2.3 million. Accounting for the fiscal year limit, the credit will reduce revenue by $500,000 annually.

The bill's restriction on the current law deduction for adoption expenses is expected to increase revenue by about $30,000 annually, for a net impact of a $470,000 revenue loss.
