2 create 440.42 (3) (bm) of the statutes; relating to: reporting requirements for

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, charitable organizations are regulated by the Department of Regulation and Licensing (department). Generally, if a charitable organization received more than $5,000 in contributions in its most recently completed fiscal year, the organization must file an annual financial statement with the department. If a charitable organization received more than $100,000 in contributions in its most recently completed fiscal year, the organization must instead file an audited financial statement and an opinion on the statement from an independent certified public accountant.

Under this bill, a charitable organization must file an audited financial statement and an accountant's opinion if the charitable organization received more than $400,000 in contributions in its most recently completed fiscal year or, if a professional fund-raiser solicited contributions for the charitable organization, more than $100,000 in contributions. If a charitable organization received between $100,000 and $200,000 in its most recently completed fiscal year and no professional fund-raiser solicited contributions for the charitable organization, the charitable organization must file a financial statement and a review of the statement by an independent certified public accountant.
