Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

The constitution prohibits the governor, when approving an appropriation bill in part, from creating a new word by rejecting individual letters in the words of the enrolled bill, and from creating a new sentence by combining parts of two or more sentences of the enrolled bill. The constitution does not restrict the county chief executive officer, when approving an appropriation in part, from creating a new word by rejecting individual letters in the words of the resolution or ordinance, nor does it prohibit creating a new sentence by combining parts of one or more sentences of a resolution or ordinance.

This constitutional amendment prohibits the county chief executive officer from creating a new word by rejecting individual letters in the words of the resolution or ordinance and from creating a new sentence by combining parts of one or more sentences of the resolution or ordinance. This amendment also prohibits the governor from creating a new sentence by combining parts of one or more sentences of an enrolled bill.

A proposed constitutional amendment requires adoption by two successive legislatures, and ratification by the people, before it can become effective.
