Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, any record relating to a judgment of divorce, support order or paternity determination generally must contain the social security number (SSN) of each individual to whom the record relates. In addition, current law requires an individual to include his or her SSN on any application that the person makes to the state for a professional, drivers, occupational, recreational or marriage license. Currently, the applicable state agency must deny any application that does not contain the applicant's SSN. Upon receiving the SSN, the applicable state agency discloses the SSN to the department of workforce development (DWD) so that DWD may determine, among other things, whether the individual is delinquent in the payment of child support. If the individual is delinquent, the applicable state agency must deny the application.

Currently, the applicable state agency also discloses the SSN to the department of revenue (DOR) so that DOR may determine whether the individual is delinquent in the payment of certain taxes. If the individual is delinquent, the applicable state agency must deny the application.

With certain limited exceptions, this bill deletes the provisions in current law that require an applicant for a professional, drivers, occupational, recreational or marriage license to provide his or her SSN as a condition of receiving the license. This bill also deletes the provisions that require SSNs to be included on certain records relating to judgments of divorce, support orders or paternity determinations.
