Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, regional emergency response teams are required to respond to a level A release of a hazardous substance. The division of emergency management of the department of military affairs (division) is required to reimburse the regional team for costs incurred in responding to the level A release to the extent that funds are available but only if the team makes a good faith effort to identify the person responsible for the release and to obtain reimbursement for their costs from that person. Local emergency response teams are required under current law to respond to the discharge of a hazardous substance. The division is required to reimburse the local team for costs incurred in responding to the discharge to the extent that funds are available but only if the team makes a good faith effort to identify the person responsible for the discharge and to obtain reimbursement for their costs from that person.

This bill allows the regional and local response teams to receive reimbursement from the division under the same limitations as under current law and from the person who possesses or controls a hazardous substance, if the team responded to a request for assistance for what the team, in good faith, thought was going to be a level A release or discharge of a hazardous substance, although no actual release or discharge occurred.
