Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, information collected by the department of transportation (DOT), including information collected through applications for registration, operator's licenses, identification cards and operating records, must be made available to the public. This information may include personal identifiers that are defined as a person's name, street address, post-office box number or nine-digit extended zip code. DOT may also sell motor vehicle registration lists and information on electronic media compiled from motor vehicle accident and citation records. An individual may prohibit disclosure of personal identifiers in written or electronic information that contains the personal identifiers of ten or more persons.

This bill prohibits DOT, except in certain circumstances, from providing information compiled by DOT that contains the personal identifiers of ten or more people. This bill continues to allow DOT to disclose information containing the personal identifiers of ten or more persons to a county or village clerk, the department of revenue or to a law enforcement agency if the information is used to perform a legally authorized function, or to an insurer if the information is used to issue or renew a policy or underwrite, bill, process or pay a claim. Persons receiving information containing the personal identifiers of ten or more people are required to keep this information confidential.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
