Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law allows a court to impose four types of restraining orders: domestic abuse, child abuse, vulnerable adult, and harassment. For each petition for an order, the court first holds a hearing to determine whether to issue a temporary restraining order and later holds a hearing to determine whether to issue an injunction. Temporary restraining orders are effective until the court holds the injunctive hearing. At the hearing, if the court issues a child abuse, vulnerable adult, or harassment injunction, the injunction is effective once the subject of the injunction is served with the injunction. If the court issues a domestic abuse injunction, however, it is effective as soon as the court issues it as long as the subject was served with the petition and the notice of the time for the injunctive hearing.

ASSEMBLY BILL 54

This bill makes a child abuse injunction, vulnerable adult injunction, or harassment injunction effective as soon as the court issues it as long as the subject was served with the petition and notice of the time for the injunctive hearing.
