October 24, 1969.

Mr. Thomas T. Melvin
Assistant Chief Clerk
Assembly Chambers
State Capitol
Madison, Wisconsin 53702

Dear Mr. Melvin:

You have requested my opinion as to the effect of assembly substitute amendment 2 to Assembly Bill 604 and

JOURNAL OF THE ASSEMBLY [October 23, 1969]

sec. 32.19 of the Statutes in cities of the first class employing ch. 275, Laws of 1931 (Kline Law), in real property acquisitions.

Assembly Bill 604 proposes to allow certain payments over and above "just compensation" to assist persons who must relocate their homes or businesses due to the construction of a public improvement. The bill follows the general pattern of the Federal Highway Act of 1968, although, it is broader and includes all takings for public purposes.

Section 32.19 of our present statutes, allows payment to property owners for certain items of actual damage over and above just compensation. These are: realignment of personal property, removal of personal property to another site, refinancing costs, certain rental losses, and expense of plans rendered unusable.

The "Kline Law" is a method of property condemnation applicable only to cities of the first class. It is not found in the statutes. It is ch. 275, Laws of 1931, as amended, and is entitled as follows:

"AN ACT empowering any city to plan and make certain public improvements, to acquire or condemn property for public purposes and improvements, to make assessments of benefits and damages for such improvements and acquisitions of property, to finance the same, and providing the procedure therefor."

Essentially, this law pertains to procedure. Perhaps, the most important difference between the Kline Law and the procedures provided in ch. 32 of the Statutes, is that the Kline Law provides for a procedure for assessments of benefits and damages which is not provided in ch. 32 procedures. (See secs. 32.05 and 32.06, Wis. Stats.) The law also provides for a simplified method of jury determination of the necessity of the taking which, of course, is no longer needed.

The important point to note is that nowhere in the Kline Law and its various amendments, can I find any provision that purports to set up any different standard as to just compensation or the payment or non-payment of additional benefits found in sec. 32.19, Wis. Stats. In fact, if any separate set of standards were set forth, grave legal problems would arise since "just compensation" is a question for judicial determination and I fail to see how the law could allow different standards in different parts of this state for the payment of sec. 32.19 claims or relocation assistance claims. There are only two sections in ch. 32, where the Kline Law is referred to. These are secs. 32.05 and 32.06, Wis. Stats., which are procedural statutes. They read as follows:

"32.05 Condemnation for streets, highways, storm or sanitary sewers, watercourses, alleys and airports. This section does not apply to town highways created or altered under ch. 80 except as to jury trials on appeals provided for by ss. 80.24 and 80.25, nor to proceedings in cities of the first class under chapter 275, laws of 1931, as amended (Kline Law). All other condemnation of property for public alleys, streets, highways, airports or storm sewers and sanitary sewers or watercourses undertaken by sewerage commissions governing metropolitan sewerage districts created by s. 59.96 or 66.20 shall proceed as follows:

"32.06 Condemnation procedure in other than highway, etc., matters. The procedure in condemnation in all matters except streets, highways, storm or sanitary sewers, watercourses, alleys and airport acquisitions, acquisitions under chapter 275, laws of 1931, as amended (Kline Law), acquisitions under ch. 157, and acquisitions under ch. 197, shall be as follows:

"* * *"

The provisions of sec. 32.19, Wis. Stats., were originally made a part of our law by ch. 639, Laws of 1959. This act was a rather complete recodification of Wisconsin eminent domain laws which was the work of a special committee appointed by the Governor for this purpose.

Assembly Bill 483 (1959), which became ch. 639, contains this explanatory note as to sec. 32.05, Wis. Stats.:

"The ordinary laying out of town roads pursuant to ch. 80, Stats., is not affected. Proceedings for laying out streets and alleys in the city of Milwaukee under the Kline Law are not affected." (Emphasis supplied)

I am aware that the city of Milwaukee has enacted an ordinance under its Code which deals with claims for damages. This section, 2-195, reads as follows:

"2-195 Committee on Claims in Condemnation.

JOURNAL OF THE ASSEMBLY [October 23, 1969]

(a) Such committee shall have jurisdiction over all claims presented to the city of Milwaukee for damages because of the taking or using of private property by the city of Milwaukee for public purposes, except school purposes. * * * Such committee shall consider all claims arising from condemnation proceedings instituted under Chapter 275, Laws of 1931 as amended, or under any other law under which the city of Milwaukee is authorized to condemn, or arising by reason of negotiations under threat of condemnation under any such law. * * *

I believe this section of the Milwaukee Code, like the Kline Law, only deals with procedures and does not alter the basic state law as to "just compensation" or other damages which the legislature now has or may make payable.

In my opinion, the Kline Law is procedural only. Sec. 32.19 payments must be made as required by law, as well as relocation payments set forth in Assembly Bill 604, if enacted into law, to all affected property owners.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT W. WARREN,
Attorney General.

CAPTION: The so-called "Kline Law", ch. 275, Laws of 1931, (relating to acquisitions of real property in cities of the first class) is procedural only and does not govern the law of "just compensation," which is a matter of judicial determination. Sec. 32.19, Wis. Stats., which allows payments to property owners in addition to "just compensation" applies to all property acquisitions in the state including those made under "Kline Law" procedure, as would the additional payments proposed in Assembly Bill 604 (1969).
