Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

The bill would preclude legal actions made against state and local governments stemming from actions regarding Year 2000. This may save these governments expenses deriving from successful legal actions and the costs of defending against legal actions whether successful or not. No data exists on the potential amount of these savings though they may be substantial.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications

None specifically known at this time. Since the bill protects state and local governments from Year 2000 liability issues substantial costs may be avoided.
