Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Year 2000 impact statements

This bill provides that whenever a bill is introduced in either house of the legislature that would have an impact on the ability of a state governmental unit, a local governmental unit or any other person to avoid a year 2000 problem, as defined in the bill, the speaker of the assembly, president of the senate or the chairperson of the standing committee to which the bill is referred may require that a year 2000 impact statement be prepared by the department of administration (DOA). The statement describes the impact upon the year 2000 problem that would result from enactment of the bill.

Information gathering

This bill permits any state or local governmental unit which or officer who has regulatory power over any person to require that person to provide to the unit or officer information relating to year 2000 processing. Year 2000 processing includes any communication made by the person to any other person or persons: 1) concerning an assessment, projection or estimate relating to, or plans, objectives or timetables for implementing or verifying year 2000 processing capabilities of an entity, product, service or set of products or services; 2) concerning test plans, dates or results, or operational problems or solutions related to year 2000 processing by products or services that incorporate or otherwise utilize products; 3) concerning the correction or avoidance of a year 2000 processing failure in computer hardware, a computer system, a component of a computer system, a computer program or software or services utilizing any computer hardware, system, component, program or software or services; or 4) reviewing, commenting on, or otherwise directly or indirectly relating to year 2000 processing capabilities. The information may only pertain to a matter relating to public health or safety that is regulated by that authority or a matter relating to public health or safety that has an effect upon a matter that is regulated by that authority. The bill defines “year 2000 processing” as processing, transmitting or receiving date data from, into and between the 20th and 21st centuries and during the years 1999 and 2000, and from leap year calculations. Currently, no such authority exists.

ASSEMBLY BILL 67

Under the bill, if any business fails to provide the information required, knowingly gives a false answer to a request for information or evades the answer to any request for information, each director, partner or proprietor of that business is subject to a forfeiture (civil penalty) of $100 for each offense. Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

The bill requires each state or local governmental unit which or officer who receives information under the bill to withhold from access all information provided to the unit or officer under the public records access law, except that the unit or officer must provide the information to DOA upon written request of the department and may, upon written consent of a person who provides information to the unit or officer, provide the information to another specified person or to any person.

Educational outreach

This bill directs DOA to contract with one or more private contractors to provide educational outreach with respect to the potential failure of computers to process, transmit or receive date data from, into and between the 20th and 21st centuries and during the years 1999 and 2000 and from leap year calculations, and the methods of correction and contingency planning for such failures. Under the bill, DOA has discretion to determine the persons to whom the outreach is to be provided. The bill appropriates $100,000 in general purpose revenue for this purpose, to be utilized prior to January 1, 2000.

Currently, DOA has no authority or responsibility to conduct outreach for this purpose. Under current law, state agencies may contract for services that they are authorized or required to provide if the services can be provided more economically or efficiently by contract, subject to certain statutory requirements, rules of DOA and collective bargaining laws and agreements. State agencies must justify the need for contractual service procurements. This bill provides that certain of these statutes and rules do not apply to the contractual services that DOA is required to procure under the bill.

False, deceptive or misleading statements or representations concerning year 2000 readiness

This bill prohibits a person from making any statement or representation with regard to the year 2000 readiness of an electronic computing device which is false, misleading or deceptive. Under the bill, it is false, misleading or deceptive to state or represent that an electronic computing device is able to process, transmit or receive date data from, into and between the 20th and 21st centuries and during the years 1999 and 2000, and from leap year calculations if the electronic computing device cannot do so without modification or alteration.

A person who violates this prohibition may be subject to a forfeiture (civil monetary penalty) of not less than $100 nor more than $10,000. In addition, a person adversely affected by the false, misleading or deceptive statement or representation may bring an action for relief and may be awarded one or more of the following: damages of not less than $500 nor more than twice the amount of actual damages; injunctive or declaratory relief; specific performance; and reasonable attorney fees. In addition, the department of justice at the request of the department of agriculture, trade and consumer protection (DATCP) or a district attorney may bring an action to restrain a person from violating the prohibition created in the bill and to award a person damaged by any violation twice the amount of damages the person suffered.

Finally, under the bill DATCP may request any person to provide DATCP with information about the year 2000 readiness of any electronic computing device that the person sells or offers to sell or has ever sold or offered to sell in this state. If a person fails to respond to an information request from DATCP or if the person provides false, misleading or deceptive information to DATCP, then any person adversely affected by the failure of that electronic computing device to be year 2000 ready may bring an action against the person who failed to respond or who responded with false, misleading or deceptive information. The court may award the injured party appropriate relief, including damages of not less than $500 nor more than twice the amount of actual damages, injunctive or declaratory relief, specific performance and reasonable attorney fees.

Admissibility of statements concerning year 2000 processing capabilities

This bill provides that no year 2000 processing information provided by a person at the request of a governmental unit that has regulatory power over the person is admissible in any civil action or proceeding. Any other year 2000 processing information may be offered in evidence only if the information is in a statement made by a person who knew that the statement was false, misleading or deceptive or that was made with reckless disregard as to the truth or falsity of the statement, if the information is in a republished year 2000 statement that the person who republished the statement knew was false, misleading or deceptive, if the information is in a statement made by a person who was compensated for providing a year 2000 statement as part of a contractual service or made by a person when soliciting a consumer, if the information is offered in any action brought by the state or a local governmental unit acting in regulatory, supervisory or enforcement capacity or if the information is offered in an action relating to false, deceptive or misleading statements or representations concerning year 2000 readiness.

Testing of local emergency management contingency plans

Under current law, the adjutant general, as the head of the department of military affairs is required to develop and promulgate a statewide plan of emergency management for the security of persons and property and to provide training to and standards for local emergency planning agencies. This bill gives the adjutant general the funding authority for the testing of the local emergency management agency contingency plans concerning possible failure of computer devices to deal with the year 2000 problems.

Activation of national guard

Under current law, in response to a war, insurrection, rebellion, riot or invasion, in the event of a public disaster resulting from a flood, conflagration or tornado, or upon application of certain public officials, the governor may order into active service all or any portion of the national guard. Current law also includes a procedure for activating the national guard if the governor is not able to do so.

ASSEMBLY BILL 67

This bill allows for activation of the national guard for a public disaster resulting from a computer device's failure to recognize and respond correctly to the year 2000 date data and in anticipation of such a public disaster.

State and local governmental liability

Currently, under the common law doctrine of sovereign immunity, the state is immune from lawsuits, except in certain instances in which laws permit the state to be sued or the enforcement of a federal or constitutional right is involved. State authorities and local governmental units do not enjoy such broad immunity, although narrower grants of immunity are provided to such authorities and units under various specific laws. Also, in certain limited circumstances, a state governmental officer, employe or agent may be sued for certain acts or omissions even though a lawsuit arising from the same acts or omissions may not be brought against the governmental unit that the officer, employe or agent serves. A state or local governmental officer, employe or agent who is sued for a negligent action or omission may be protected from liability currently if the officer, employe or agent makes a good faith attempt to resolve the problem that results in the act or omission. No punitive damages (damages not resulting from direct or indirect loss but awarded, instead, as punishment for wrongful conduct) may be awarded in any lawsuit against a state or local governmental officer, employe or agent based upon tort (a noncontractual claim based upon alleged wrongful conduct). Damages in tort lawsuits are generally limited to $250,000 in the case of a state officer, employe or agent, or $50,000 in the case of a local governmental unit or officer, employe or agent thereof. Currently, with certain exceptions, the state and local governments must pay interest on late payments to vendors.

This bill provides that no person may recover any damages against any state or local governmental unit, including a state authority, or any officer, employe or agent thereof, for any act or omission caused by the failure of an electronic computing device that is under the control of such a unit, officer, employe or agent to process, transmit or receive date data from, into and between the 20th and 21st centuries and during the years 1999 and 2000 and from leap year calculations if the unit had a remediation plan in effect at the time of the act or omission that was designed to prevent the failure and the unit or the officer, employe or agent made a reasonable effort to find, identify and replace or correct any electronic computing device that may have contributed to the failure. The bill also voids any contrary provision of a contract entered into on or after the day on which the bill becomes law. In addition, the bill provides that the state and local governments are not required to pay interest to vendors on late payments arising from a "year 2000" failure described above.

For further information see the state and local fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
