

DRAFTER'S NOTE FROM THE
LEGISLATIVE REFERENCE BUREAU

March 13, 2000

It is possible that a party might refuse to attend the educational program just so that a final divorce is not granted. For that reason, you may want to make conditioning the final judgment generally discretionary, as in current law, or discretionary if the court or family court commissioner determines that a party is refusing to attend for the purpose of delaying or preventing the final judgment.
