Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

This bill would permit two individuals to enter into a domestic partnership to which all the statutes and rules related to marriage and dissolution of marriage would extend. However, the bill does not specify how those provisions would apply to a domestic partnership. It is unclear what the financial obligation of the domestic partners would be to a child of the relationship, particularly in situations involving same sex partnerships. Additionally, child support agencies are required by federal law to establish and enforce health insurance coverage for children in IV-D cases. It is unclear whether this bill would extend the right to family coverage to a child who is neither the biological nor adopted child of the domestic partner. This may make it difficult for child support agencies to establish and enforce orders for insurance coverage.

States receive funding from the federal government based on their performance in establishing and enforcing orders. This bill could potentially limit the state's ability to establish and enforce orders involving domestic partners and could, therefore, reduce our eligibility for federal funding. It is impossible to estimate a potential loss.
