Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, the department of regulation and licensing, examining and affiliated credentialing boards and many other state agencies, departments and boards issue licenses, permits, certificates or other credentials for professional or occupational purposes. Current law prohibits those agencies, departments and boards from issuing or renewing a professional or occupational license, permit, certificate or other credential if the individual fails to provide his or her social security number or fails to pay child, family or spousal support ordered by a court or if the individual is delinquent in the payment of taxes. The agencies, departments and boards are required by current law to limit, restrict or suspend the professional or occupational license, permit, certificate or other credential if the individual fails to provide his or her social security number or fails to pay child, family or spousal support ordered by a court or if the individual is delinquent in the payment of taxes.

This bill would prohibit state agencies, departments and boards from issuing or renewing a professional or occupational license, permit, certificate or other credential if the individual is in default (more than 120 days past due on the payment) on a student loan. The agency, department or board is required to notify the individual that the license, permit, certificate or other credential will not be issued or renewed until the individual is not in default on the loan. The bill requires the agencies, departments and boards to limit, restrict or suspend the professional or occupational license, permit, certificate or other credential if the individual is in default on a student loan 90 days after the notice of the default is mailed to the individual. The bill also asks the supreme court to promulgate rules that deny, suspend, restrict or refuse to renew a license to practice law if the individual is in default on a student loan.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
