Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, a person who is believed to be mentally ill and a proper subject for treatment and who evidences certain acts, omissions or other behavior that indicate that he or she satisfies at least one of five standards of dangerousness may be detained on an emergency basis and transported to and detained and treated in a mental health treatment facility. A petition signed by three others may be brought against the detained person alleging that the detained person is mentally ill, is a proper subject for treatment and is dangerous because he or she meets a standard for involuntary civil commitment. (Emergency detention is not, however, a prerequisite to bringing such a petition; it can be brought against any person.) If such a petition is filed with a court, the subject of the petition must be given a hearing to determine if there is probable cause sufficient to support the petition's allegations. If a court finds probable cause, a final hearing on commitment must be held, and if, again, the person is found to have satisfied one of the standards of dangerousness he or she may be involuntarily committed to the care and custody of a county department of community programs for appropriate treatment.

Currently, one of the five standards of dangerousness for emergency detention and involuntary civil commitment terminates on December 1, 2002. That standard, known as the "fifth standard", requires that a person, because of mental illness, either evidence the incapability of expressing an understanding of the advantages and disadvantages of and alternatives to accepting a particular medication or treatment after these have been explained to him or her or evidence substantial incapability of applying an understanding of those advantages, disadvantages and alternatives to his or her mental illness in order to make an informed choice as to whether to accept or refuse medication or treatment. The person must evidence also a substantial probability, as demonstrated by both his or her treatment history and recent acts or omissions, that he or she needs care or treatment to prevent further disability or deterioration. Lastly, the person must evidence a substantial probability that he or she will, if left untreated, lack services necessary for his or her health or safety and suffer mental, emotional or physical harm that will result in either the loss of his or her ability to function independently in the community or the loss of cognitive or volitional control over his or her thoughts or actions.

Under current law, the attorney general or his or her designee must review an emergency detention that is made under the fifth standard before the detention takes place or within 12 hours after. If the attorney general or designee disapproves or fails to act with respect to the proposed detention, it may not be carried out; if the attorney general or designee disapproves or fails to act with respect to an actual emergency detention, the detained person must be released. The attorney general or designee also must review a petition for involuntary commitment that is based on the fifth standard before the petition is filed with a court or within 12 hours after the filing. If the attorney general or designee disapproves or fails to act with respect to a proposed petition, the petition may not be filed; if the attorney general or designee disapproves or fails to act with respect to a filed petition, the subject of the petition, if he or she has been detained under the petition, must be released and the petition is void. These provisions do not apply if the attorney general or designee makes a finding that a court of competent jurisdiction in this state, in a case challenging the constitutionality of the fifth standard, has upheld the constitutionality.

Currently, the inpatient treatment of a person who is involuntarily committed under the fifth standard may not be more than 30 days, unless the person violates a condition of outpatient treatment. Medication and treatment may be administered without the consent of the person if a court finds probable cause to believe that the person meets the fifth standard and if the court finds at the final commitment hearing that the standard is met.

Currently, the files and records of court proceedings for involuntary commitment of individuals are closed except to the individual or to other persons with the individual's informed consent and, without the individual's consent, to the individual's attorney or guardian ad litem in order that the attorney or guardian ad litem may prepare for certain proceedings with respect to the individual. Treatment records of an individual are confidential and may be released without the informed written consent of the individual only to certain persons or under certain circumstances. An individual's counsel or guardian ad litem may have access to the treatment records, without informed consent, at any time, without limitation, in order to prepare for proceedings with respect to the individual; access by the counsel for the interest of the public without informed consent, however, is restricted to those treatment records concerning the admission, detention or commitment of an individual who is presently admitted, detained or committed.

This bill eliminates the fifth standard for emergency detention. The bill eliminates also the December 1, 2002, termination of the fifth standard for involuntary civil commitment of persons with mental illness.

The bill eliminates the opportunity for the filing of a petition for involuntary commitment of persons under the fifth standard of dangerousness before review and approval by the attorney general or his or her designee has been obtained; under the bill, no petition for involuntary commitment of an individual under the fifth standard of dangerousness may be filed unless the attorney general or his or her designee has reviewed and approved it.

ASSEMBLY BILL 746

The bill provides access by the counsel for the interests of the public to an individual's files and records of court proceedings and to the individual's treatment records, to the same extent that the individual's attorney or guardian ad litem has the access.

ASSEMBLY BILL 746*SECTION 6

1           SECTION 6. 51.20 (1) (a) 2. e. of the statutes is amended to read:

2           51.20 (1) (a) 2. e. For an individual, other than an individual who is alleged to 3 be drug dependent or developmentally disabled, after the advantages and
4 disadvantages of and alternatives to accepting a particular medication or treatment
5 have been explained to him or her and because of mental illness, evidences either
6 incapability of expressing an understanding of the advantages and disadvantages of 7 accepting medication or treatment and the alternatives, or substantial incapability
8 of applying an understanding of the advantages, disadvantages and alternatives to

10 or refuse medication or treatment; and evidences a substantial probability, as 11 demonstrated by both the individual's treatment history and his or her recent acts
12 or omissions, that the individual needs care or treatment to prevent further
13 disability or deterioration and a substantial probability that he or she will, if left
14 untreated, lack services necessary for his or her health or safety and suffer severe
15 mental, emotional or physical harm that will result in the loss of the individual's 16 ability to function independently in the community or the loss of cognitive or 17 volitional control over his or her thoughts or actions. The probability of suffering
18 severe mental, emotional or physical harm is not substantial under this subd. 2. e.

25 provision for the individual's care or treatment in the community under this subd.

ASSEMBLY BILL 746

1 2. e. The individual's status as a minor does not automatically establish a substantial

4 SECTION 7. 51.20 (1) (ad) 1. of the statutes is amended to read:

7 to ~~or within 12 hours after~~ the time that it is filed. If the attorney general or his or 8 her designee disapproves or fails to act with respect to the petition, the petition may 9 not be filed. ~~If the attorney general or his or her designee disapproves or fails to act~~

18 shall furnish to the court and the subject individual an initial recommended written 19 treatment plan that contains the goals of treatment, the type of treatment to be 20 provided and the expected providers. The treatment plan shall address the
