Subject: Conference Committee action on home heating oil tanks

Last night the conference committee adopted the attached language regarding home heating oil tanks. The intent of the language is to exempt existing, but not new, home heating oil tanks from the tank tightness test, closure and upgrading requirements. Please draft this as an amendment to be included in the conference committee amendment. Please call me if you have any questions. Thanks.

Exempt underground and above ground heating oil tanks that store less than 1,100 gallons for residential, consumptive use on the premises where stored from any administrative rules that require an owner to test the ability of a storage tank, connected piping or ancillary equipment to prevent an inadvertent release of a stored substance or requiring an owner to permanently close or upgrade a storage tank. Specify that the provision would only apply to tanks installed before the effective date of the bill.
