Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate
Presently, social service agencies may release childrens' records to parents unless they determine that the inspection of the records would result in danger to someone. School personnel must keep pupils' records relating to problems resulting from the use of alcohol or drugs confidential . Parents of developmentally disabled children have access to their childrens' court or treatment records unless the child is 14 or older and files a written objection to the access. This bill requires social service agencies and school personnel to release pupil or agency records upon the request of the parent unless the agency or school board petitions the juvenile court for an order prohibiting the disclosure of the information on the basis that it would result in danger to someone. It also requires access to a parent of any child's court or treatment records for mental illness, developmental disability, alcoholism or drug dependence at any time. It is impossible to predict the number of additional hearings that would result under this bill for the juvenile courts. Additional hearings will require additional judge, court reporter, court staff and guardian ad litem time. These costs are borne by both the state and the county. The exact cost is impossible to predict with the data available.
