Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Currently in juvenile cases, the county must pay for the cost of an examination ordered by a court to determine the competency to proceed of a juvenile who is alleged to have committed a delinquent act or to determine whether a juvenile is not responsible for a delinquent act by reason of mental disease. This bill permits the county that pays such costs to recover from the juvenile's parent or guardian, based on their ability to pay, a reasonable contribution toward the costs.

It is impossible to predict the amount of money that counties might collect for these costs. Many of the parents of juveniles in these types of cases are poor and how much they would be able to contibute to the cost cannot be estimated. Additional costs would be incurred by the court staff in trying to recoup these costs from the parents. It is expected that current staff would have to absorb any additional work.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications
