Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

Bill Summary:

The bill authorizes certain issuing agents appointed by the DNR to report to the Department persons who pay for fish and game licenses, stamps, and other approvals with worthless checks. An issuing agent may make such a report after having attempted to receive payment from the person who paid for the approval. Upon receipt of the report, DNR must revoke the approval. The bill requires the Department to notify the approval holder that the approval has been revoked for failure to make payment, and the holder must return the approval to the Department within seven days after receiving notification.

Fiscal Estimate

This bill does not substantially affect the Department's current methods for dealing with bad checks. Currently, when notified that a license has been purchased with a bad check, the Department closes a customer's license account and issues a credit to the vendor for the license. If a warden identifies a person trying to use a license paid for with a worthless check, the warden is aware that the license is invalid.

Under this bill, the Department must also notify each person holding an approval purchased with a bad check and require that the license be returned within seven days after receiving notification. No additional enforcement action would be required because there is no penalty in the bill for failure to return the license. However, whether or not the license is returned, it remains invalid.

In the past 18 months, the Bureau of Customer Service and Licensing has received approximately three notices from license agents that they were unable to collect on bad checks written for fish or game approvals. There would be no identifiable fiscal impact in order to notify an average of about 2 individuals per year.
