Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

This bill eliminates the requirement in current law that applicants for hunting or fishing licenses under Chapter 29 of the statutes must provide their social security number and repeals the requirement that DNR must deny or suspend an application or revoke or suspend an approval if a person fails to provide the number. This provision, if enacted, would put DVD out of compliance with the requirement of the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-93) and the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (P.L. 105-33) which require states to have procedures for the collection of social security numbers on applications for recreational licenses. This, in turn, would subject the state of Wisconsin to a potential loss of federal funding the state receives for W-2 and the child support program. Wisconsin currently receives over $60 million annually in child support funding and $317 million annually in federal TANF funding, all of which would be at risk.

Additionally, the state's ability to enforce child support orders through the use of recreational license suspension would be prohibited, thereby potentially reducing child support collections.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications

Wisconsin had until October 1, 2000 to comply with all the requirements of PRWORA. Enabling legislation was enacted in the 1997-1998 legislative session, 1997 Wisconsin Act 191, which authorizes the collection of social security numbers on all license applications. The federal government has already threatened states with a loss of federal funding based on failure to comply with a single requirement in PRWORA. Wisconsin faces a loss of close to $377 million annually which would eliminate the provision of child support and W-2 services in this state.
