Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau
Under current law, a person may not practice as a nursing home administrator, or use such a title, unless he or she is granted a license by the nursing home administrator examining board (board). To obtain a license, a person must pass an examination regarding the laws governing long-term care facilities, the administration of such facilities, and the needs of persons served by the facilities. A person may not take the examination unless he or she satisfies educational requirements that the board considers are adequate preparation for nursing home administration. In addition, a person may not take the examination if he or she has an arrest or conviction record the circumstances of which substantially relate to nursing home administration.

Also under current law, a nursing home administrator license expires on July 1 of each even-numbered year, unless the license is renewed. To renew a license, a person must apply to the board for a certificate of registration. In addition, the board may take disciplinary action against a person who is licensed, including suspending or revoking a license, if he or she engages in specified prohibited conduct. For example, the board may take disciplinary action if a person is incompetent or acts in a manner inconsistent with the health and safety of the residents of a nursing home, or if the nursing home that he or she administers has a pattern of serious violations of federal or state laws.

This bill requires the board to also grant licenses to hospital administrators and changes the name of the board to the hospital and nursing home administrator examining board. Under the bill, except for a hospital administrator employed by the federal government, a person may not practice as a hospital administrator, or use such a title, unless he or she is licensed as a hospital administrator by the board. The requirements for obtaining and renewing a hospital administrator license are similar to the requirements for a nursing home administrator license. For example, a person must pass an examination regarding the laws governing hospitals, the administration of hospitals, and the needs of patients served by hospitals. In addition, the bill requires both the hospital and nursing home administrator examinations to test knowledge of federal and state health care reimbursement programs.

The bill also imposes similar requirements that a person must satisfy to take the hospital administrator examination. Like the nursing home administrator examination, a person may not take the hospital administrator examination if he or she has an arrest or conviction record the circumstances of which substantially relate to hospital administration. In addition, a person may not take the hospital administrator examination unless he or she has received a bachelor’s degree in administration of health care facilities or programs or has completed an educational program that the board determines is substantially equivalent to receiving such a degree. For a limited time, the board must waive this educational requirement for a person who is primarily employed as a hospital administrator on the effective date of the bill. Until five years after the bill goes into effect, such a person may take the examination even if he or she does not satisfy the educational requirement. However, when a person who receives a waiver applies to renew his or her license that expires on July 1, 2008, the person must submit evidence that he or she satisfies the educational requirement. If the person does not satisfy the educational requirement by that date, his or her license may not be renewed, and he or she may not continue to practice as a hospital administrator.
Also, the bill changes the educational requirements for a nursing home administrator license. Under the bill, a person may not take the examination for that license unless he or she has received a bachelor’s degree in nursing home administration or has completed an educational program that the board determines is substantially equivalent to receiving such a degree.

In addition, the bill makes the following changes:

1. The bill requires a person who applies to renew a hospital administrator license to submit evidence that he or she completed at least 24 hours of continuing education during the preceding two-year period. Although current law requires a nursing home administrator to complete continuing education requirements, current law does not specify a minimum number of hours.

2. The bill requires the board to promulgate rules establishing a code of ethics governing the professional conduct of hospital and nursing home administrators. The rules may establish separate codes for each profession.

3. The bill allows the board to grant hospital administrator licenses to persons licensed as hospital administrators in other states. The board has similar authority under current law with respect to nursing home administrator licenses.

4. The board’s authority to take disciplinary action is expanded so that the board may also take such action against persons licensed as hospital administrators. Therefore, for example, the board may take disciplinary action if a hospital administrator is incompetent or acts in a manner inconsistent with the health and safety of the patients in a hospital, or if the hospital that he or she administers has a pattern of serious violations of federal or state laws.

5. The bill changes the membership of the board, which consists of the following members under current law: five nursing home administrators, two public members, one physician, one nurse, and, as a nonvoting member, the secretary of health and family services or his or her designee. This bill eliminates two of the nursing home administrators and replaces them with three hospital administrators. In addition, the bill adds another nurse member to the board and requires one of the nurse members to be employed in a nursing home and the other nurse member to be employed in a hospital.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
