UNIVERSITY of WISCONSIN
GREEN BAY

November 7, 1999

To Whom It May Concern:

In October 1999 our student government association (SGA) had the distinct privilege of sponsoring Marty Carlin and her production "HAVEN" at the University of Wisconsin – Green Bay. Never in my life have I been so moved by a production as I was by HAVEN. Marty and her supporting staff provided a completely unique perspective with regard to the issue of domestic violence.

The presentation of HAVEN in any community or on any college campus is nothing but a positive. As I noticed on our campus, there is very little awareness regarding the potential for domestic violence in peoples' lives. HAVEN gave students and community members a no-nonsense perspective on what people who have dealt with domestic violence have to deal with on a day-to-day basis. HAVEN does a spectacular job educating individuals on what domestic violence is and the challenges those who try to assist deal with regularly.

I have nothing but the highest respect and regard for Marty and HAVEN and I would highly recommend hosting a performance. The message it sends will cut to every nerve in your body and will make you look at those who are abused in a completely new light.

Regards,

Kurt J. Kober

The following is intended to serve as a letter of support for playwright Marte Carlin, and all who are involved in the production of the play "Haven."

Ms. Carlin's work was inspired by her own experiences as a survivor of domestic violence. As a Victim's Advocate with the Family Violence Center, it gives me a sense of true fulfillment to witness a survivor's personal growth, and then share it with others, as Ms. Carlin has.

From the beginning, it was Ms. Carlin's intention to write "Haven" and then use it as a tool to reach out to those struggling with domestic violence. I feel she has accomplished her mission on a limited scale through the performances at the UWGB Christie Theater that ran 10/23 -10/25.

The messages sent during these productions were very empowering. It is therefore essential that "Haven" does not end here. I feel strongly that with support from other agencies, businesses, and individuals, that "Haven" can become more widespread, carrying along with it the messages to help empower others.

I personally support the continuation of this production, and commend Ms. Carlin, and the cast and director on the tremendous amount of time and effort that went into creating "Haven."

Finally, I can only hope that you too will support these efforts as much as we do.

Respectfully Submitted,

Theatre On The Bay Drama Moves Audience

Literature and drama that sets out to instruct, to teach, to indoctrinate, is often boring and even annoying.

"Håven", written by Marte Carlin, and presented by Women Against Domestic Abuse Saturday night, Dec. 4 was not a bore. It was real. It was full of life. J. Allen Johnson directed the performance.

The singsong lament, "Rage" at the beginning, written and sung by Wendy Ringersma, sounded like a medieval Gregorian chant, and created a mood of sadness that was offset by the bravery, the courage, and mutual support of the women in this domestic abuse shelter as they welcomed and poured out their love and concern for a new arrival, Mattie, played by Maria C. Smith.

Mattie arrived with a "goofy" hairdo that her husband had forced her to keep. "Letting her hair down" with the help of the others, was her first step toward healing and independence. Star, too, played by Darleen Denny, cuts off her own hair in chunks, as a first step to new found emotional freedom.

The familiar theme of cutoff of funding, the "tacky," spare furniture, the plain, simple set contributed to the impression of poverty and struggle for this critically needed facility, and created a sense of brave women under siege.

Andrea Davis is the cheerful, warm-hearted Yvonne, who returns to her abusive husband on his promise to seek counseling, to give him another chance, and meets death at his hands. Her kids had been staying with grandma, and were missing her. Her friends grieved over her symbolic coffin near the end of the play, but still found courage to go on with hope.

Yvonne and Mattie had spent one whole night talking in their bedroom early in the play, then raided the refrigerator toward morning. During that long night, Yvonne had shown great wisdom and understanding; and the tragedy of her murder was an intense heartache for Mattie.

These young women were dressed to fit their parts.

Faded, plain workshirts, no fancy hair styles. They had hit rock bottom, fled their homes with nothing, yet they have come to be full of hope, thanks to the warm humanity and understanding of their "sisters."

Debra Moyer sang her song, "Within You", with guitar, and Gail Geurts read a poem, "Chill the Room," written by Lynn Adrian.

The script is not a tirade against men. It is a roadmap, however, for understanding the nature of controlling, abusive people of either sex; the cruelty of the domestic trap in homes with no emotional or physical exits.

The cast performed superbly. There was feeling in every line, no awkward pauses, timing excellent. The play, as we said at the outset, "was full of life".

The closing "Woman

Honoring Song" by Sissy Goodhouse and performed by BJ of The Ghost Horse Family, in the native American language, to honor all the women who found the courage to let go of their fear and to stand up and say 'no more pain and suffering', sent the audience away in a thoughtful mood.

The complete cast was Betty, Nancy Bjarnarnson, Alice, Wendh Ringersma, Mattie, Maria C. Smith, Star, Darleen Denny, Yvonne, Andrea Davis, CC, Debra J. Moya, and Lisa Strada, Gail Geurts.

Local woman uses theater to highlight domestic abuse

■ Former victim realizes struggles females face

By SHARON HANUSZCZAK
Eagle Herald staff writer

MARINETTE — Marie Carlin of Menominee vividly remembers coming home from work after a 10-hour day to find her husband livid about the dirty dishes in the sink.

The argument soon turned violent as her husband threw a glass at her to drive home the point that it was a woman's job to take care of the housekeeping. "He'd been home for hours and he hadn't done them," said Carlin, a domestic abuse victim. "When I walked in the door, he threw a glass and it shattered into the wall."

Still, Carlin continued to put up with her husband's put-downs, threats and violent behavior, determined to honor the vows she made on her wedding day and unwilling to go against Roman Catholic teaching on marriage.

It was not until Carlin began to plan her 25th wedding anniversary celebration that she recognized the emptiness of her life and the effect the domestic abuse was having on her two children.

"I realized I was having a 25th anniversary party and the only people allowed to come would be his parents because no one else was welcome," Carlin said. "He was very controlling. I wasn't allowed to call, get a letter or visit my brother and sister. He threatened my life and their lives."

"He would've killed me if I hadn't gotten away."

Marie Carlin about ex-husband

Fed up with the threats and years of abuse, Carlin decided to leave her husband and seek sanctuary in a safehouse with her two children. "Before I went to the safehouse, I told my sister, 'I don't think I'm going to live another year,'" said Carlin, who was forced to relocate to two different states to elude her husband before returning to Wisconsin. "I really felt he was going to kill me. He would've killed me if I hadn't gotten away."

Today, Carlin is in a loving and mutually giving relationship with a man, and determined to use her experience to encourage men and women to resolve conflicts peacefully.

Carlin has written a play about living in a shelter for abused women, which was performed at the University of Wisconsin Green Bay earlier this month, and is looking for a sponsor to bring the performance to UW-Marquette's Theatre on the Bay.

"It's entertaining as well as informing," she said of the six-woman production, "Haven," which features two women originally from the Menominee area. "I sends the message if you're being abused you can get your life back."

Carlin has also formed a non-profit corporation called "WADA (Women Against

Please see Abuse, A3

FROM A1

Abuse: Play promotes awareness

Domestic Abuse) Minute for Justice Inc.," which seeks to assist domestic abuse victims with the legal system and educate the public about the issue of domestic violence.

Members of the organization attend court proceedings with domestic abuse victims and serve as a support system for the women.

"When I went to court, there was nobody there," said Carlin, who said the experience can be very intimidating for women. "It was just me and my ex-husband."

Carlin said she wants to use her experience to help other domestic violence victims understand staying in an abusive relationship hurts children just as much as the woman being abused.

"By staying in a relationship that's bad, you're hurting your children, too," she said. "The children are the invisible victims. They see the put-downs, the meanness. I wanted my daughter to understand she doesn't have to take abuse, and I wanted my son to understand this is not what you do when you get married.

Carlin

If we can get children to understand the reality that violence doesn't solve problems, we will do a lot to end domestic violence."

For more information about WADA Minute for Justice Inc. or about sponsoring "Haven" in the Marinette area, people can call 864-3654 or e-mail Carlin at wadaminute@yahoo.com.

ROBERT L. COWLES

Wisconsin State Senator • 2nd Senate District

January 30, 2001

Senator Robson, Chairperson
Committee on Human Services and Aging
5 South State Capitol
Madison, WI 53707

Dear Chairperson Robson,

I would like to offer my recommendation of Ms. Linda Schwallie to an appointment to the Examining Board of Social Workers, Marriage and Family Therapists and Professional Counselors.

In my opinion, Ms. Schwallie would make an outstanding addition to the Board. She has held leadership positions with the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy at both the state and national levels. Her appreciation of the importance and benefit of the regulatory process for consumers of mental health services as well as for the regulated profession could be valuable to the board.

I would appreciate your consideration of Ms. Schwallie for an appointment to the Examining Board of Social Workers, Marriage and Family therapists and Professional Counselors.

Sincerely,

ROBERT L. COWLES
