Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

The bill does not have a fiscal effect on the Department of Commerce.

The bill also does not have a direct fiscal effect on local governments, particularly counties, because the provisions are permissive. Nonetheless, a county that chooses to build, furnish or rent housing facilties is likely to incur additional costs related to constructing, financing, furnishing, staffing and administering the programs. It is not possible, however, to project the amount of these additional costs, if any, because the number of counties that will choose to build, furnish and rent housing facilities is unknown. In addition, it is not possible to project the size and scope of the housing programs that an individual county, if any, will choose to develop and administer within its jurisdiction.
