Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, a person may petition the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to have the person's land designated as forest cropland. Land may be designated as forest cropland if the land is more useful for growing timber and other forest crops than for any other purpose and if the landowner agrees to engage in forestry activities on the land. The landowner does not pay property taxes on the land during the time in which the land is designated as forest cropland; however, the landowner must agree to keep the land in the forest cropland program for either 25 years or 50 years, at the landowner's option. If the landowner withdraws the land from the program before the 25-year or 50-year period expires, the landowner is subject to property taxes on the land, plus interest, from the date on which DNR first designated the land as forest cropland, unless the land is transferred to the federal government, the state, or a local governmental unit and used for a public road, railroad, utility right-of-way, park, recreational trail, wildlife or fish habitat area, or public forest.

Under this bill, land that is withdrawn from the forest cropland program before the 25-year or 50-year period expires is also not subject to property taxes and interest if the land is transferred to the federal government, the state, or a local governmental unit; located in the town of Rome in Adams County; and used for economic development.

Under current law, the owner of a parcel of land may petition DNR to have the parcel designated as managed forest land, if the parcel consists of at least ten contiguous acres in a single municipality and if at least 80 percent of the parcel is producing or is capable of producing a minimum of 20 cubic feet of merchantable timber per acre per year. The owner of land that is designated as managed forest land pays an annual acreage share on the land rather than property taxes. Under current law, a person who owns managed forest land may sell all or certain parts of the land to another person, but if the land no longer satisfies the eligibility requirements under the managed forest land program after the land is sold, the person who owns the land must pay a withdrawal tax. The withdrawal tax is an amount equal, in part, to the product of the total net property tax rate in the municipality where the land is located for the year prior to the year in which the land was sold and the assessed value of the land for the prior year, multiplied by the number of years that the land was designated as managed forest land.

Under the bill, land designated as managed forest land that is sold to the federal government, the state, or a local governmental unit, but that no longer satisfies the eligibility requirements under the managed forest land program, is not subject to the withdrawal tax if the land is located in the town of Rome in Adams County and will be used for economic development.
