Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This proposed constitutional amendment, proposed to the 2003 legislature on first consideration, transforms the Wisconsin legislature from a bicameral legislature that consists of an assembly and a senate into a unicameral legislature that consists of only one house, beginning with the legislature elected at the general election in 2006.

The unicameral legislature will have 75 members elected from single-member districts on a nonpartisan basis for staggered 4-year terms.

Under the constitution presently, the assembly has the power of impeachment and the senate is the court for the trial of impeachments. Under this proposal, the legislature has the power of impeachment and is the court for the trial of impeachments.

A proposed constitutional amendment requires adoption by 2 successive legislatures, and ratification by the people, before it can become effective.
