the homeowner ✓

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, the Wisconsin Housing and Economic Development Authority (WHEDA) operates a Property Tax Deferral Loan Program, under which WHEDA makes loans to homeowners who are 65 years of age or older for the purpose of helping the homeowner pay his or her property taxes and special assessments. A homeowner is eligible for a loan under the program if he or she earned $20,000 or less in income in the year prior to the year in which the property taxes or special assessments for which the loan is made are due. Outstanding liens and judgments affecting the property, not including the loan under the program or housing and rehabilitation loans, also administered by WHEDA, may not exceed 33% of the value of the property. The amount of a loan in any one year may not exceed the lesser of $2,500 or the sum of the following: 1) property taxes for which the loan is sought; 2) any special assessments on the property; and 3) any interest and penalties on any delinquent property taxes or special assessments.

This bill changes the eligibility requirements for the program by providing that a homeowner is eligible for a loan if he or she earned 80% or less of the median income of the county in which the property is located in the year prior to the year in which the property taxes or special assessments for which the loan is made are due. The bill changes the permissible amount of outstanding liens and judgments that may affect the property to 65% of the value of the property, including the loan under the program and housing and rehabilitation loans, if any. Finally, the bill provides that the maximum amount that WHEDA may loan to a homeowner in any one year is the sum of the property taxes for which the loan is sought; any special assessments on the property; and any interest and penalties on any delinquent property taxes or special assessments.

Because this bill directly or substantially affects the development, construction, cost, or availability of housing in this state, the Department of Administration, as required by law, will prepare a report to be printed as an appendix to this bill.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
