Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This substitute amendment makes numerous changes to the laws governing business corporations. It also makes changes to the laws governing limited partnerships, nonstock corporations, and limited liability companies.

BUSINESS CORPORATIONS

Mergers with certain wholly owned subsidiaries

Current law generally permits a business corporation organized under the laws of this state to reorganize as a holding company that owns the stock of one or more separately incorporated business operations. Under current law, such a reorganization may be accomplished through a transaction involving the original corporation (parent corporation), an entity created and owned by the original corporation (wholly owned subsidiary), and a third entity created and owned by the wholly owned subsidiary (indirect wholly owned subsidiary). Generally, the transaction culminates in the merger of the parent corporation with the indirect wholly owned subsidiary. The parent corporation survives the merger, and its shareholders trade their shares for shares in the wholly owned subsidiary. The wholly owned subsidiary, which owns all of the interests in the parent corporation, becomes the holding company.

With certain exceptions, current law permits a corporation to merge with or into another business entity only if, among other requirements, the corporation's shareholders approve a plan of merger adopted by the corporation's board of directors (board). With certain exceptions, this substitute amendment permits a parent corporation to merge with an indirect wholly owned subsidiary, including a corporation or limited liability company, without shareholder approval, if the following conditions are satisfied:

1. Every share in the parent corporation is converted into a share in the holding company, subject to the same rights and limitations that applied to the share prior to conversion.
2. The entity surviving the merger becomes a wholly owned subsidiary of the holding company.
3. The directors of the parent corporation become the directors of the holding company.

4. The provisions of the holding company's articles of incorporation and bylaws (or, if the holding company is a limited liability company, its operating agreement) are generally identical to those of the parent corporation's.

5. The provisions of the surviving entity's articles of incorporation and bylaws or operating agreement are generally identical to those of the parent corporation's.

6. If the surviving entity is a limited liability company, its operating agreement contains provisions that grant members certain rights enjoyed by shareholders of the parent corporation under current law or under the parent company's articles of incorporation or bylaws.

7. The parent corporation's board determines that the merger will not result in any gain or loss for federal income tax purposes.

Other changes related to mergers, share exchanges, and business combinations

Currently, when a corporation approves a merger or share exchange, it must file articles of merger or share exchange with the Department of Financial Institutions (department). Among other things, the articles of merger or share exchange must include the plan of merger or share exchange. This substitute amendment deletes this requirement and, instead, requires the articles of merger to state that a plan of merger or share exchange has been approved and adopted as required by law, that the plan is on file at the principle place of business of the surviving corporation, and that the surviving corporation will provide a copy of the plan, upon request and without cost, to any shareholder or, upon payment of the cost of producing the copy, to any other interested person. The substitute amendment also specifies other information that must be included in the articles of merger or share exchange.

Currently, a business combination (including certain mergers) must be approved by a specified supermajority of shareholders, unless the shareholders receive a minimum price for their shares, computed under a specified formula. This substitute amendment redefines a component of the formula, the valuation date, as the day before the first public announcement of the proposed business combination.

With certain exceptions, the voting power of a person owning greater than 20 percent of a corporation's stock is currently limited to 10 percent of the full voting power of those shares, unless the corporation's articles of incorporation provide otherwise or unless regular voting power is restored by vote of the shareholders. This substitute amendment permits the board of directors to specify that regular voting power will apply.

Under current law, if a shareholder dissents from certain mergers, share exchanges, or other business combinations, the shareholder may obtain payment of the fair value of his or her shares. Under current law, a dissenting shareholder is entitled to receive fair value if either of the following apply: 1) the corporation that issued the stock held by the dissenting shareholder (issuing corporation) is a party to a merger for which shareholder approval is required under certain provisions in current law or under the issuing corporation's articles of incorporation; or 2) the corporation is a subsidiary corporation that is merging with a parent corporation.

Under the substitute amendment, a dissenting shareholder may also obtain fair value if the issuing corporation is a parent corporation that is merging with a subsidiary, unless the merger satisfies certain conditions specified in the substitute amendment relating to the effect of the merger on the rights of shareholders.

Currently, the fair value is determined pursuant to several specified criteria. With limited exceptions, this substitute amendment provides an exemption from these dissenter's rights if the applicable shares are registered on a national securities exchange or quoted in the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. This exemption is identical to the exemption that applies generally to other dissenter's rights provisions.

Currently, a parent corporation that owns at least 90 percent of the outstanding interests of a subsidiary business entity may merge with the subsidiary without the approval of the parent's shareholders or the owners of the interests in the subsidiary. Under the substitute amendment, such a merger requires the approval of the parent's shareholders unless certain conditions relating to the rights of the parent's shareholders are satisfied.

Classes or series of stock

Under current law, a corporation's articles of incorporation may authorize the board to determine the relative rights of a class or series of shares of stock. Generally, the board may set the terms of a class or series without shareholder approval. The board may revise the terms by resolution, as long as no shares have been issued. The board may revise the terms of shares that have already been issued only by amendment to the articles of incorporation.

Under this substitute amendment, at any time after filing articles of amendment creating a class or series of shares, the board may: 1) decrease the number shares of a class or series, but not below the number of outstanding shares of the class or series; 2) eliminate a class or series, if no shares of the class or series are outstanding; or 3) increase the number of shares of a class or series, but not beyond the number of shares authorized by the articles of incorporation.

Shareholder notices and meetings

Current law requires a corporation to notify shareholders of certain events and information. This substitute amendment exempts a corporation from all such notice requirements as to an individual shareholder if a specified number of notices or dividend payments sent to the shareholder are returned to the corporation as undeliverable. A shareholder may reinstate the notice requirements by delivering to the corporation the shareholder's current address.

Transfer of property to certain affiliates and other changes related to business corporations

Current law also prescribes the conditions under which a board may transfer the corporation's property. This substitute amendment permits a board to transfer the corporation's assets to other entities that are wholly owned by the corporation, except in connection with a plan that involves a transfer of all or substantially all of the corporation's assets and that requires shareholder approval.

This substitute amendment also permits a corporation to specify in its articles of incorporation or bylaws the rules for conducting shareholder meetings, and sets default rules for corporations that do not adopt their own rules. The substitute amendment also makes changes to current law regarding the formation and membership of a committee created by a board, and the substitute amendment deletes certain restrictions on the power of such committees. Further, the substitute amendment makes changes to current law relating to identifying a registered agent.

OTHER CHANGES

Under current law, when a limited partnership, business corporation, nonstock corporation, or limited liability company merges with or converts to another entity (or when a business corporation enters into a share exchange), title to all personal property transfers, by operation of law, to the surviving entity. Title to real estate generally must be transferred by deed, which must be recorded in the appropriate office of the register of deeds. This substitute amendment deletes the requirement that a deed be executed and recorded. Under the substitute amendment, if a limited partnership, business corporation, nonstock corporation, or limited liability company merges with or converts to another entity, the articles of merger or certificate of conversion filed with department must indicate whether a business entity that does not survive the merger or conversion has a fee simple ownership interest in real estate in this state.

Currently, the name of a limited partnership must contain the words “limited partnership” without abbreviation. This substitute amendment allows the name to include abbreviated versions of those words.

The substitute amendment requires that the surviving entity of a merger or conversion file a report with the Department of Revenue (DOR) that specifies the effective date of the merger or conversion, the name and address of each business entity that is a party to the merger or conversion, the name of any person at the surviving entity that DOR may contact with regard to submitting the report and the information contained in the report, the parcel identification number and location of all fee simple ownership interests in real estate located in this state acquired by the surviving entity in the merger or conversion, a certified copy of the document providing evidence of the merger or conversion, and, in the case of a conversion, a sworn statement that the ownership interests in the surviving entity are identical with the ownership interests in the original entity immediately preceding the conversion. Under the substitute amendment, forms prescribed by the Department of Financial Institutions (DFI) for articles of merger and certificates of conversion must contain a notice of the real estate reporting requirement.

Under the substitute amendment, DFI must report quarterly to DOR identifying mergers and conversions for which articles of merger and certificates of conversion have been filed with DFI indicating that an entity acquired in the merger or an entity converted in the conversion had a fee simple ownership interest in any Wisconsin real estate.

 14 failure to specify each municipality as described under sub. (1) (d) and if such failure 15 is not the result of the surviving entity's intentional act or omission.

22 180.0602 (3) (b) 1. Except as otherwise provided in this subdivision, after the 23 articles of amendment are filed under sub. (2), the board of directors may decrease

7 board of directors may eliminate from the articles of incorporation all matters set 8 forth in the articles of amendment with respect to that class or series by adopting 9 another resolution for that purpose. The board of directors shall prepare a certificate 10 setting forth the content of any resolution under this subdivision, stating that none 11 of the authorized shares of the class or series are outstanding, and stating that no 12 such shares will be issued under the articles of amendment and shall deliver the 16 amendment with respect to the applicable class or series.

17 3. Except as otherwise provided in this subdivision, after the articles of 18 amendment are filed under sub. (2), the board of directors may increase the number 19 of shares of the class or series that is the subject of the articles of amendment by 20 adopting another resolution appropriate for that purpose. The board of directors

23           DEFINITIONS. In this section:

25           (b) and that, during the period beginning with its incorporation and ending with the 2 subsidiary of the parent corporation that is party to the merger.

3 (b) “Indirect wholly owned subsidiary” means any of the following:

5 to the effective time of a merger under this section, owned by a parent corporation 6 indirectly through one or more business entities.

INSERT S-5

15 (d) “Parent corporation” means a corporation owning, prior to the effective time 16 of a merger under this section, all of the outstanding shares of each class of another 17 corporation or all of the outstanding interests of each class of another business entity.

18 (e) “Surviving entity” means the limited liability company or corporation, other 19 than the holding company, surviving a merger under sub. (2).

20 (f) “Wholly owned subsidiary” means any of the following:

21 1. A corporation, all of the outstanding shares of each class of which are owned 22 by a corporation indirectly through one or more business entities or directly.

23 2. A limited liability company organized under ch. 183, all of the outstanding 24 interests of each class of which are owned by a corporation indirectly through one or 25 more business entities or directly.

1           (2) MERGER AUTHORIZED. Unless the articles of incorporation of the parent 2 corporation specifically provide otherwise, or the parent corporation is a statutory 3 close corporation under ss. 180.1801 to 180.1837, a parent corporation may merge 4 with or into one of its indirect wholly owned subsidiaries pursuant to s. 180.1101 5 without approval of the shareholders of the parent corporation or the shareholders 6 or members of the indirect wholly owned subsidiary if all of the following conditions 7 are satisfied:

8           (a) The parent corporation and the indirect wholly owned subsidiary are the 9 only parties to the merger.

10           (b) Each share or other interest of the parent corporation outstanding 11 immediately prior to the effective time of the merger is converted in the merger into 12 a share or equal interest of a corporation that was a wholly owned subsidiary of the 13 parent corporation immediately prior to the effective time of the merger having the 14 same designation, preferences, limitations, and relative rights as the share or other 15 interest of the parent corporation outstanding immediately prior to the effective time 16 of the merger.

17           (c) Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, immediately following the 18 effective time of the merger, the organizational documents of the holding company 19 issuing shares in the merger pursuant to sub. (2) (b) contain provisions identical to 20 the organizational documents of the parent corporation immediately prior to the 21 effective time of the merger. This requirement does not apply to provisions regarding 22 the incorporator or incorporators, the corporate name, the registered office and 23 agent, and provisions that are subject to amendment under s. 180.1002. To the 24 extent that the 2nd sentence of s. 180.0852 applied to the parent corporation 25 immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, the organizational documents

1 of the holding company immediately following the effective time of the merger shall 2 contain provisions implementing that sentence. If s. 180.1706 (2) and (3) applies to 3 the parent corporation, pursuant to s. 180.1706 (1), immediately prior to the effective 4 time of the merger, the articles of incorporation of the holding company immediately 5 following the effective time of the merger shall contain provisions implementing s.
6 180.1706 (2) and (3).

7 (d) Immediately following the effective time of the merger, the surviving entity 8 is a wholly owned subsidiary of the holding company.

9 (e) The directors of the parent corporation immediately prior to the effective 10 time of the merger are the directors of the holding company immediately following 11 the effective time of the merger.

12 (f) Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, the organizational 13 documents of the surviving entity immediately following the effective time of the 14 merger contain provisions identical to the organizational documents of the parent 15 corporation immediately prior to the effective time of the merger. With respect to a 16 surviving entity that is a corporation, this requirement does not apply to provisions 17 regarding the incorporator or incorporators; the corporate name; the registered office 18 and agent; or provisions that are subject to amendment under s. 180.1002 or any 19 other law permitting amendment of the articles of incorporation without approval 20 of the shareholders. With respect to a surviving entity that is a limited liability 21 company, this requirement does not apply to provisions regarding the organizer or 22 organizers; the entity name; the registered office and agent; references to members 23 rather than shareholders; references to interests, units, or similar terms rather than 24 shares; references to managers rather than directors; or provisions that are subject 25 to amendment under any law permitting amendment of the operating agreement

1 without approval of the members. The organizational documents of the surviving 2 entity immediately following the effective time of the merger may specify a reduced 3 number of classes and shares or other interests that the surviving entity is 4 authorized to issue. To the extent that the 2nd sentence of s. 180.0852 applied to the 5 parent corporation immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, the 6 organizational documents of the surviving entity immediately following the effective 7 time of the merger shall contain provisions implementing that sentence. If s.
8 180.1706 (2) and (3) applies to the parent corporation, pursuant to s. 180.1706 (1), 9 immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, the organizational documents 10 of the surviving entity immediately following the effective time of the merger shall 11 contain provisions implementing s. 180.1706 (2) and (3). The organizational 12 documents of the surviving entity immediately following the effective time of the 13 merger shall contain provisions that specifically refer to this paragraph and that 14 require all of the following:

15 1. Any act, other than the election or removal of directors or managers of the 16 surviving entity, for which approval of the shareholders or members of the surviving 17 entity is required under this chapter, ch. 183, or the surviving entity's organizational 18 documents may be accomplished only with the additional approval of the 19 shareholders of the holding company or any successor to the holding company, by the 20 same vote as is required for approval of the shareholders or members of the surviving 21 entity under this chapter, ch. 183, or the surviving entity's organizational 22 documents.

23 2. If the surviving entity is a limited liability company, any act, other than the 24 election or removal of managers of the surviving entity, for which approval of the 25 shareholders of the surviving entity would be required under this chapter if the 1 surviving entity were a corporation may be accomplished only with the additional 2 approval of the shareholders of the holding company or any successor to the holding 3 company, by the same vote as would be required for approval of the shareholders 4 under this chapter if the surviving entity were a corporation.

5 3. If the surviving entity is a limited liability company, any amendment of the 6 organizational documents of the surviving entity that would be required under this 7 chapter to be included in the articles of incorporation of the surviving entity if the 8 surviving entity were a corporation, other than an amendment specified in s.
9 180.1002, may be accomplished only with the additional approval of the 10 shareholders of the holding company or any successor to the holding company, by the 11 same vote as would be required for approval of the shareholders under this chapter 12 if the surviving entity were a corporation.

13 4. If the surviving entity is a limited liability company, the affairs of the 14 surviving entity are managed by or under the direction of a group of managers 15 consisting of individuals who have the same fiduciary duties toward the surviving 16 entity and its members as the directors of a corporation have toward the corporation 17 and its shareholders and who are liable for breach of their duties to the same extent 18 as directors of a corporation.

19 (g) In the opinion of the board of directors of the parent corporation, the 20 shareholders of the parent corporation do not have a gain or loss under the Internal 21 Revenue Code as a result of the merger.

22 (3) ARTICLES OF MERGER. The surviving entity shall include in the articles of 23 merger under s. 180.1105 a statement that the merger was approved in accordance 24 with this section and that the requirements of sub. (2) have been satisfied.

1           (4) EFFECT OF MERGER. All of the following occur when a merger under sub. (2) 2 takes effect:

3           (a) To the extent that the restrictions of s. 180.1131, 180.1141, or 180.1150 4 applied to the parent corporation and its shareholders immediately prior to the 5 effective time of the merger, the restrictions apply to the holding company and its 6 shareholders immediately following the effective time of the merger to the same 7 extent as if the holding company were the parent corporation as the corporation 8 existed immediately prior to the effective time of the merger. For purposes of ss.
9 180.1130, 180.1132, 180.1141, 180.1142, 180.1143, and 180.1150, the shares of the 10 holding company acquired in the merger are deemed to have been acquired at the 11 time and for the price and form of consideration that the shares of the parent 12 corporation that were converted in the merger were acquired.

13           (b) If immediately prior to the effective time of the merger s. 180.1141, 14 180.1142, or 180.1150 did not apply to a shareholder of the parent corporation, the 15 section does not apply to the shareholder as a shareholder of the holding company 16 solely by reason of the merger.

17           (c) If the corporate name of the holding company immediately following the 18 effective time of the merger is the same as the corporate name of the parent 19 corporation immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, the shares of the 20 holding company into which the shares of the parent corporation are converted in the 21 merger are represented by the certificates that previously represented shares of the 22 parent corporation.

23           (d) A shareholder of the parent corporation immediately prior to the effective 24 time of the merger retains any right that the shareholder had immediately prior to 1 the effective time of the merger to institute or maintain a derivative proceeding in 2 the right of the parent corporation.

3 (e) No act of the surviving entity that requires the additional approval of the 4 shareholders of the holding company or any successor company pursuant to sub. (2)

5 (f) shall give rise to dissenters' rights under ss. 180.1301 to 180.1331 for the 6 shareholders or the beneficial shareholders of the holding company or any successor 7 to the holding company.

8 (f) To the extent that shares of the parent corporation immediately prior to the 9 effective time of the merger constituted shares of a preexisting class, the shares of 10 the holding company immediately following the effective time of the merger 11 constitute shares of a preexisting class to the same extent as if the holding company 12 were the parent corporation as the parent corporation existed immediately prior to 13 the effective time of the merger. Shares or interests of the surviving entity do not 14 constitute shares of a preexisting class for purposes of s. 180.1705. For purposes of 15 s. 180.1707, to the extent that shares of the parent corporation immediately prior to 16 the effective time of the merger constituted shares of a preexisting class, the shares 17 or interests of the surviving entity constitute shares of a preexisting class to the same 18 extent as if the surviving entity were the parent corporation as the parent 19 corporation existed immediately prior to the effective time of the merger.

20 (g) To the extent that the provisions of s. 180.1706 (4) applied to the parent 21 corporation immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, the provisions 22 apply to the holding company immediately following the effective time of the merger 23 to the same extent as if the holding company were the parent corporation as the 24 corporation existed immediately prior to the effective time of the merger. To the 25 extent that the provisions of s. 180.1706 (4) applied to the parent corporation

1 immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, if the surviving entity is a 2 corporation, the provisions apply to the surviving entity immediately following the 3 effective time of the merger to the same extent as if the surviving entity were the 4 parent corporation as the corporation existed immediately prior to the effective time 5 of the merger. To the extent that the provisions of s. 180.1706 (4) applied to the parent 6 corporation immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, if the surviving 7 entity is a limited liability company, the provisions apply to the corresponding 8 provisions of the organizational documents of the surviving entity immediately 9 following the effective time of the merger to the same extent as if the surviving entity 10 were the parent corporation as the corporation existed immediately prior to the 11 effective time of the merger.

12 (h) To the extent that immediately prior to the effective time of the merger 13 shareholders of the parent corporation had rights or were subject to obligations or 14 restrictions of the types referred to in s. 180.0627 (2), 180.0630 (4), 180.0722 (2), 15 180.0730 (1), or 180.0731 (1), the rights, obligations, or restrictions apply to the 16 shareholders of the holding company immediately following the effective time of the 17 merger to the same extent as if the holding company were the parent corporation as 18 the corporation existed immediately prior to the effective time of the merger, unless 19 the agreement, waiver, proxy, or trust establishing the rights, obligations, or 20 restrictions specifies otherwise.
