Description Voluntary intoxication as a defense to criminal liability

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

This bill eliminates voluntary intoxication as a defense to criminal liability. The bill is unlikely to change the number of criminal cases brought before the courts. It could change the issues to be litigated in cases involving intoxication, such as whether the alleged intoxication is voluntary or involuntary.

An accurate estimate of the impact of the change on the court system is impossible with the data available, but it is likely the fiscal impact will be minor.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications
