Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill creates a state enterprise development fund for the purpose of making grants to state agencies in the executive branch, other than the University of Wisconsin System, for information technology development projects. Under the bill, “information technology” means electronic processing, storage and transmission of information using data processing and telecommunications. The fund consists of fee revenue received by agencies from vendor notification services that is authorized or required to be deposited in the fund (see below), moneys transferred to the fund by the Department of Administration (DOA) from state agency appropriation accounts (see below), moneys derived from gifts, grants, and bequests made for information technology development purposes, and moneys transferred to the fund from other funds.

The bill directs the secretary of administration to designate an employee of DOA to serve as the chief information officer of this state. Under the bill, any state agency may apply to the chief information officer for a grant to finance the cost of an information technology development project from the enterprise development fund. The chief information officer may make a grant to a state agency to finance all or any portion of the cost of a project from the fund if the officer determines that a project will permit the effective utilization of information technology by the agency and will be consistent with DOA’s existing statutory responsibilities to ensure adequate information technology for agencies and to implement a statewide strategic plan for information technology purposes. The chief information officer is directed to accord priority to financing projects that will effect cost savings or promote cross-agency integration of information technology in the best interests of the state or to projects that will improve the cost efficiency of services provided by the state and local governments. The chief information officer is not required to fully expend the moneys in the enterprise development fund in any fiscal year. Unallocated moneys in any fiscal year remain available for expenditure in the succeeding fiscal year.

The bill permits DOA to transfer to the enterprise development fund moneys from the appropriation account for any appropriation other than a sum sufficient appropriation made to any state agency in the executive branch other than the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin System that is authorized by law to be used for the administration of any program in an amount determined by the secretary of administration not greater than the amount of savings to be realized in expenditures from that appropriation during the fiscal biennium in which the transfer is made (or the fiscal year if the appropriation is made for a fiscal year), as a result of server or personal computer consolidation, decreased costs incurred by an agency for server usage, or decreased costs of agencies for information technology procurement as compared with corresponding costs for the preceding fiscal period. Similarly, the bill permits DOA to transfer to the enterprise development fund any revenues currently received by DOA from state agencies, local governments, or entities in the private sector for information technology development.

The bill also permits DOA, with notice to the Joint Committee on Finance (JCF), to transfer moneys from most existing appropriations made to state agencies in order to fund an information technology development project in an amount not greater than the estimated total savings to the state, as determined by the chief information officer, that will accrue from implementation of the project during the useful life of the project. In addition, the bill permits DOA to advance moneys from the unappropriated balances of program revenue accounts or any segregated fund to temporarily finance an information technology development project for a program financed with program or segregated revenue if insufficient appropriated program revenue or segregated revenue is available to pay for the project.

Under current law, information technology development projects for state agencies in the executive branch are either carried out by DOA or by an agency under delegation from DOA. The bill does not change this procedure.

The bill also requires each state agency that receives funding from the information technology investment fund for an information technology development project during any fiscal year to submit an annual status report on the project for that fiscal year and an additional report one year after completion of the project to the secretary of administration, the chief information officer, and JCF.

Under current law, DOA or any executive branch agency to which DOA delegates purchasing authority may provide a notification service under which prospective vendors are notified of potential procurement opportunities. This bill permits any agency that provides a notification service to charge a fee for that service. The bill also requires each executive branch agency, other than the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin System, to deposit all revenue received from such fees in the enterprise development fund. The bill also permits other state agencies to deposit revenue received from such fees in the enterprise development fund.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
