duties. An employee is not entitled to receive wages or salary while taking family or medical leave, but may substitute, for portions of family or medical leave, other types of paid or unpaid leave provided by the employer.

When an employee returns from family or medical leave, the employer must immediately place the employee in the employment position that the employee held before the leave began or, if that position is filled, in an equivalent employment position. An employee is not entitled to accrue any seniority or employment benefits while on family or medical leave, but is entitled to have his or her group health insurance coverage maintained under the conditions that applied before the leave began.

This bill permits ^{the employee or of} an employee of an employer that employs at least 15 individuals on a permanent basis to take unpaid family military leave during a period of active service of a spouse or child of the employee of 30 days or more in the U.S. armed forces, the national guard of this state or of any other state, or the state defense force under an order of the president of the United States or of the governor of this state or of any other state (period of active service). Specifically, the bill permits an employee of an employer that employs between 15 and 50 individuals on a permanent basis to take no more than 15 working days of unpaid family military leave during a period of active service and an employee of an employer that employs more than 50 individuals on a permanent basis to take no more than 30 working days of unpaid family military leave during a period of active service.

~~Under the bill, an employee may not take family military leave unless the employee has first exhausted all vacation leave, personal leave, and compensatory time that the employee has accrued and any other leave that may be granted to the employee, except sick leave and disability leave, and may not substitute, for portions of family military leave, paid or unpaid leave of any other type provided by the employer. When an employee returns from family military leave, the employer must immediately place the employee in the employment position that the employee held before the leave began or, if that position is filled, in an equivalent employment position. An employee is not entitled to accrue any seniority or employment benefits while on family military leave, but is entitled to have his or her group health insurance coverage maintained under the conditions that applied before the leave began.~~
