Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, if a person commits a misdemeanor (which, in general, is a crime for which a person may be imprisoned for no more than one year) before he or she reaches the age of 21, a court may order that the court's record regarding the offense be expunged upon the offender's successful completion of his or her sentence. (A person successfully completes a sentence if he or she is not convicted of a subsequent offense and, if the person is placed on probation, he or she complies with any condition of probation.) The court may enter such an order only at the time of sentencing and only if it finds that expunging the record will benefit the person and will not harm society. If the person successfully completes the sentence in such a case, the Department of Corrections or the county jail or house of correction must issue a certificate stating that the person successfully completed the sentence. The expungement takes effect immediately upon the issuance of that certificate.

This bill makes this expungement option available for all offenders, regardless of their age at the time of their offenses, unless the misdemeanor conviction was the result of a plea agreement for certain felony charges. In addition, upon the expungement of a person's conviction, he or she can no longer be affected by any prohibition, disqualification, disability, increased penalty, or other adverse or unfavorable treatment that results from a misdemeanor conviction, including any adverse consequences that might result from a court's consideration of the expunged offense in any subsequent case. Moreover, neither the existence nor the contents of court records relating to the expunged offense may be disclosed to anyone other than the person or his or her attorney. The bill also permits a court to enter an order authorizing expungement at any time during or after the sentence. The bill, however, specifies that expungement may not occur within the first two years after the person's misdemeanor conviction and that, in general, a person is eligible for expungement only once in his or her lifetime.
