Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill requires a person who practices genetic counseling to be licensed by a seven-member genetic counselors affiliated credentialing board (board), created by the bill. The board consists of four persons licensed under the bill, two persons licensed to practice medicine and surgery, and one public member. The board members serve four-year terms.

The bill defines genetic counseling as interpreting, analyzing, integrating, and delivering any of the following to individuals and families: 1) individual and family medical histories; 2) education and information about inheritance, genetic testing, management, prevention, resources, and research; and 3) social and psychological support. In addition, the foregoing activities do not satisfy the definition of “genetic counseling” unless they are performed for the following purposes: 1) to provide guidance about the medical, psychological, and familial implications of genetic contributions to disease; 2) to assess the mode of inheritance and chance of occurrence or recurrence of conditions with a genetic component; or 3) to promote informed choices and adaptations to a risk or condition.

The following persons are exempt from the bill's licensure requirement: 1) any person lawfully practicing within the scope of a license, permit, registration, or certification granted by the state or the federal government; 2) any person assisting and under the direct supervision of a licensed genetic counselor; 3) certain students of genetic counseling who are assisting a genetic counselor; and 4) a person who is licensed to practice genetic counseling in another state or country and is providing assistance to a genetic counselor licensed in this state.

To qualify for licensure under the bill, a person must have completed a degree-granting educational program in genetic counseling approved by the board and accredited by the American Board of Genetic Counseling (ABGC). In addition, the person must have passed either an examination administered by ABGC or the genetic counseling exam administered by the American Board of Medical Genetics. Finally, the person must obtain and maintain certification with ABGC. The board may waive these requirements for a person who holds an unexpired genetic counselor license issued by another state or territory if the board determines that the requirements for licensure and renewal are substantially equivalent to the requirements for licensure and renewal in this state. If the person completed a degree-granting educational program in genetic counseling that is not in the United States, the person must satisfy any additional requirements established by the board by rule.

This bill permits the board to provide, by rule, for the issuance of a temporary license to a person who has not passed the requisite exam; the temporary license may be renewed only once. A person holding a temporary license may practice genetic counseling only under the supervision of a person licensed under the bill.

The bill also authorizes the board to make investigations and conduct hearings to determine whether a violation of the bill has occurred. The board may reprimand a genetic counselor or deny, limit, suspend, or revoke a license granted under the bill if a genetic counselor or applicant for licensure has engaged in prohibited conduct. The bill requires the board to revoke the license of a genetic counselor who has failed to maintain certification with ABGC or whose certification with ABGC has been revoked.

The bill requires the board to promulgate rules that define the standards of practice of genetic counseling and permits the board to define the scope of practice of genetic counseling. In addition, this bill also does each of the following: 1) makes current law regarding the preservation, destruction, and confidentiality of patient health care records applicable to genetic counselors; 2) includes genetic counselors in the definition of "health care provider" for the requirements under current law for powers of attorney for health care and for the prohibition under current law on discrimination related to acquired immunodeficiency syndrome; 3) requires a genetic counselor, like other professionals under current law, to make certain reports regarding abused or neglected children; and 4) provides to genetic counselors the same protection from discipline under current law that is available to other health care professionals who make certain reports regarding violations of laws applicable to pharmacists or controlled substances or of laws or clinical or ethical standards by health care facilities, health care providers, or employees of such facilities or providers.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
