Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

The proposed legislation requires that full-time candidates for law enforcement positions submit to a psychological evaluation before being appointed as a full-time officer. The bill also requires the Law Enforcement Standards Board to submit a report to the legislature by April 1, 2011, that makes a recommendation as to whether psychological evaluations should be required on part-time or limited term law enforcement officers.

The UW-System campus police departments currently require that new full-time officers submit to such evaluations. These evaluations range in price from $300-$600 per full-time candidate. Currently, this evaluation is not required of part-time or limited term candidates. If evaluations are required of these candidates, there will be an indeterminate fiscal effect on the UW-System that it may be possible to absorb.
