REFERRAL OF AGENCY REPORTS

State of Wisconsin
Office of Justice Assistance
Madison

March 20, 2012

To the Honorable, the Legislature:

Pursuant to Wisconsin Statutes 13.172 (2), I am pleased to submit the annual report of the Wisconsin Justice Information Sharing (WIJIS) program to the legislature.

Wisconsin Statutes 16.971(9) provides the basis for state coordination of automated justice information systems among state and local criminal justice agencies. The Wisconsin Office of Justice Assistance (OJA) housed within the Department of Administration (DOA) has primary responsibility for carrying out this statute.

2011 was a transitional year for the WIJIS program. For the first time, the 2011-2013 biennial budget included stable state funding for staff needed to maintain and operate existing WIJIS products and to fulfill the legislative directive for statewide coordination of automated justice sharing.

The breadth of the justice system (from arrest to community corrections, and all the steps in between) makes a statewide-strategic vision of justice information sharing essential. As an independent and neutral state criminal justice agency that does not have an operational role in the daily administration of justice, OJA is uniquely positioned to facilitate the statewide strategic vision necessary to improve information sharing among the many state and local systems that drive justice system operations.

WIJIS has two main operational products. The Justice Gateway is a web-based search tool that can access multiple data sources stored by local and state agencies in separate data systems at the same time. Workflow Services routes justice information among criminal justice professionals; Workflow Services is a flexible technology that is applicable to solving many justice business process challenges. Additional data submitters and users continue to be added to the Justice Gateway; existing applications of Workflow Services (like eCitations) are well established, and new uses for Workflow Services are in production.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions.

Sincerely,
JOHN MURRAY
Executive Director
