4 to repeal and recreate 101.615 (title); and to create 101.61 (1c), 101.615
5 (2m), 145.01 (10) (br) 4. and 145.01 (10) (br) 5. of the statutes; relating to: the 6 applicability of the one-family and two-family dwelling code to certain
7 structures used for camping and the exclusion of certain recreational vehicles
8 and portable toilet systems from the definition of plumbing.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, any one-family or two-family dwelling for which initial construction began on or after December 1, 1978, must comply with the one-family and two-family dwelling code (dwelling code). Under current law, the Department of Safety and Professional Services promulgates rules for this code which includes standards for heating, ventilation, plumbing, electricity, and other systems. One-family and two-family dwellings for which initial construction began before that date are not covered by this code but are subject to the state electrical and plumbing codes.

This bill excludes from the dwelling code cabins and other structures that are used for camping and that are located in a campground, camping resort, or recreational or educational camp for which a permit has been issued by the Department of Health Services (DHS); that are occupied in a manner consistent with certain rules promulgated by DHS; that are vacant at least 180 days each year; and that do not have a porch or deck that extends more than 12 feet out from an exterior wall.

This bill also excludes portable toilet systems and holding or transfer tanks used to collect wastewater from camping units and recreational vehicles from the definition of plumbing, which is used in the statutory provisions regulating the plumbing trade and for purposes of the state plumbing code.
