3 certificate.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law restricts the circumstances in which the state registrar or a local registrar may permit inspection of, or disclosure of information contained in, certain birth certificates for births that occurred after September 30, 1907, to requests for inspection by, or disclosure to, persons of interest specified under current law. Current law also provides that the state registrar or a local registrar may not issue a certified copy of a birth certificate for any birth that occurred after September 30, 1907, unless the requester is one of those specified persons of interest. Under current law, a person of interest can be any of the following:

1. The subject of the birth certificate (subject).
2. A member of the subject's immediate family.
3. The parent of a subject, unless the parent is a birth parent whose parental rights to the subject have been terminated.
4. The subject's legal custodians or guardians.
5. A representative authorized by a permissible requester, including an attorney.
6. Any other person who demonstrates a direct and tangible interest when information is necessary for the determination or protection of a personal or property right.

SENATE BILL 400

Under this bill, for purposes of these provisions, persons of interest are limited to the following:

1. The subject of the birth certificate.
2. The parent of a subject, unless the parent is a birth parent whose parental rights to the registrant have been terminated.
3. The subject's legal custodians or guardians.
4. An attorney representing the subject, the parent of the subject, or the legal custodian or guardian of the subject.

As under current law, the bill also allows the state registrar or a local registrar to issue a certified copy of a birth certificate pursuant to a court order.
