Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law provides that, with certain exceptions, no hospital, nursing home, intermediate care facility for persons with an intellectual disability, home health agency, or hospice (health facility) may employ the services of a nurse aide unless the individual has successfully completed an instructional program and a competency evaluation program that are approved by the Department of Health Services (DHS). A nurse aide is defined as an individual who performs routine patient care duties that are delegated by a registered nurse or licensed practical nurse who supervises the individual, for the direct health care of a patient or resident. Current law requires DHS to promulgate rules that establish standards for the approval of nurse aide instructional programs and competency evaluation programs and requires DHS to approve programs that meet those standards.

This bill permits DHS to approve instructional programs for nurse aides that allow an individual who has successfully completed an instructional program for nurse aides in another state to receive instruction that, when combined with the instructional program in the other state, will result in the individual having received substantially the same instruction as an individual who successfully completes an instructional program approved by DHS under current law (bridge program). As under current law and subject to the same exceptions, an individual who successfully completes a bridge program must successfully complete a competency evaluation program approved by DHS in order to work in a health facility.
