Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill clarifies the reporting requirements made applicable to political parties and certain committees authorized to receive contributions from corporations, cooperatives, and American Indian tribes by 2015 Wisconsin Act 117.

Act 117 permits corporations, cooperatives, and American Indian Tribes to make contributions of up to $12,000 a year to a segregated fund established and administered by a political party or a legislative campaign committee. Act 117 also permits corporations, cooperatives, and American Indian tribes to make unlimited contributions to independent expenditure committees and referendum committees. Act 117 requires each such political party and committee to prepare itemized reports of contributions received and disbursements made by the political party or committee.

This bill requires political parties and legislative campaign committees to separately itemize contributions made to a segregated fund by corporations, cooperatives, and American Indian tribes. The bill also requires independent expenditure committees and referendum committees to separately itemize contributions received by corporations, cooperatives, and American Indian tribes. Finally, the bill requires political parties and legislative campaign committees to separately itemize on their campaign finance reports disbursements made from their segregated funds.
