Description
Return of a seized firearm to the person who owns the firearm

Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

This bill provides a timeline by which a seized firearm is to be returned to the person who owns the firearm.

Prosecutors believe there will be additional hearings in most cases where a person has requested the return of a seized firearm. Though the hearings require more of a prosecutor's time, it is difficult to quantify how many additional hearings there will be; consequently, a fiscal effect is indeterminate.

Long-Range Fiscal Implications

Prosecutors believe some of their time will be required for hearings pertaining to the return of seized weapons; however, it is difficult to provide an estimate of the long-term fiscal effect that this bill will have should it be enacted.
